Lancaster Farming

VOL. 27 No. 35 | Three Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, June 26, 1982 | $7.50 per year

LuAnn Brenneman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Brenneman of R1 Mount Joy, was named the county's new dairy princess during ceremonies at the Host Farm in Lancaster. Past county princess and current State Princess Alternate Deb Greider said a tearful goodbye to the audience after which she crowned LuAnn. For the new princess' story, see Page B18.

Specter probes dairy ideas

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Farmers Association in conjunction with the American Farm Bureau, Monday, called for an elimination of laws, after 1985, which provide authority to implement government-subsidized farm programs.

PFA spokesman Roger Hoke presented his announcement before a hearing called for by Senator Arlen Specter to explore the current dairy situation. Hoke was one of several farm, dairy and consumer leaders who attended Specter's special hearing.

Hoke announced that his organization supported changes in the current dairy program which would provide for a "market-oriented agriculture."

This would mean, Hoke explained, that supply and demand rather than government action, should ultimately determine production and prices.

"Toward that end, all laws, which provide authority to implement government-subsidized farm programs should be eliminated after the 1985 crop year," Hoke said.

Prior to 1985, however, Hoke said his organization will work to maintain a viable dairy price support program that provides a floor under milk prices but not at a level that encourages production of large quantities of milk that consumers will not buy.

During Specter's hearing, State Agriculture Secretay Penrose Hallowell stressed the importance of Pennsylvania's dairy industry

Sales of milk from these farms totaled about $1 3 billion, over 40 percent of the state's total cash farm income Pennsylvania also has 160 licensed milk dealers who employ 11,000 workers Another 27,000 are employed on our dairy farms

"But they have become victims of their own success With milk support prices sitting at the minimum level, farmers have been encouraged to produce more to make a living, " Hallowell stated.

Daniel Martin, spokesman for Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative explained that dairy producers responded to increasing price policies set by the Carter Administration

It now appears that changes in legislation are needed to reduce the current level of milk production and also the cost of the price support program to the federal treasury," Martin said

Martin urged Specter to support the National Milk Producers' Federation program, recently introduced into the U S. House by Congressman Tom Harkin

"This legislation would provide for a two-tier pricing system The higher price would be the support level which would prevail for up to five billion pounds of milk

Ag bills become law

HARRISBURG — Governor Dick Thornburgh found two pieces of agricultural legislation on his desk last Friday, along with nearly 100 other bills, as he began a day's work of lawmaking. With a stroke of his pen, Thornburgh signed into law Senate Bill 1283, the Farmland Preservation bill introduced by Senator Edward Helfrick (R-27th), and SB 1350, the Milk Sanitation bill sponsored by Senators Frank O'Connell (R-20th), Edward Helfrick, and Patrick Stapleton (D-41st)

In signing SB 1283, Thornburgh stressed this legislation is designed to "keep state-owned farmlands in agricultural use and assure family farmers are given the opportunity to work them."

"When I proposed the Farmlands Management Act in October of 1979, I said the state should set an example for the preservation of our valuable farmland resources," the governor said "Through the sale of these lands with deed restrictions for agricultural use, or through long-term leasing to family farmers, this act will help keep these lands in agricultural production

"It is our desire that these farmlands, when leased or sold, will provide an opportunity for farm families and young families to enter or expand their careers in agriculture "

SB 1283 creates a nine-member advisory board to work with the secretary of agriculture in determining the most efficient and productive uses of state farmlands The advisory committee includes the director of the Bureau of Rural Affairs, the secretary of the Department of General Services, the chairmen of the House and Senate Committees on Agriculture and Rural Affairs and five farmers nominated by farm organizations and selected by the ag secretary

The Commonwealth now owns approximately 15,000 acres of farmland, including 5,822 acres which were formerly operated as state hospital farms SB 1283 transfers these farmlands at the state hospitals to PDA, and other

Pa. vo-ag faces cutbacks

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LANCASTER — There's a growing budgetary paradox facing more and more vo-ag departments across Pennsylvania.

Despite an 89 percent increase in state funds specially earmarked for vocational education, a number of vo-ag departments are particularly feeling the pinch as local school boards tighten budgets for the coming school year.

Two programs, which play important roles in the overall vocational agriculture curriculum in the state, are experiencing serious cutbacks in some areas. These are:

– Summer programs, in which vo-ag teachers work directly with students on their supervised occupational experience projects conducted on farms and with agribusiness firms.

– The Young Farmer Program, which is an extension of the secondary school vo-ag experience and permits farmers to take advantage of continuing education.

"Reports of cutbacks are spotty across the state in the summer and Young Farmer programs," Donald E Evans, assistant professor of agricultural education at Penn State, said.

"They are of major concern, particularly in view of the extra $10 million that was specifically set aside in House Bill 517 to improve and expand vocational education in Pennsylvania.

"The state specifically allocated these additional funds because vocational education, and particularly vo-ag, are considered vital to economic recovery in the Commonwealth."

This extra $10 million was added by the Legislature to $13 million that had already been allocated for vocational education. This amounted to an 89 percent increase in monies appropriated by the state to, not only stabilize vocational education programs which had already been affected the previous year, but to expand the programs.

Despite the added funds, which apparently aren't accomplishing their intended purpose in some schools, a number of reports of vo-

PDGA "Big Weekend" attracts largest crowd

BY PATTY GROSS
Staff Correspondent

HUNTINGDON — Dairy goat farmers from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Maryland and Connecticut gathered at the fairgrounds in Huntingdon County last weeked. The 5th annual "Big Weekend" attracted 50 exhibitors with 450 goats.

Saturday and Sunday were filled with four goat shows, milking competition and something new — cheesemaking competition.

Following interviews with four young men and women, a panel of judges chose Michelle Haines, 15, of Honey Grove as the Pennsylvania Dairy Goat Association Youth Representative. Michelle will be the industry's "goodwill ambassador," as she distributes awards at such events as the Pennsylvania Farm Show and Ag Progress Days.

The very serious honor of "Miss Pennsylvania" was bestowed on "CH Eight Acres T.M. Lana," a goat owned by Jennifer Croft of Stahlstown. In order for a goat to enter is must be bred and owned by a Pennsylvanian.

During the Dairy Goat

Jeff Hockenberry of Maryland walked away with the Best Doe in Show and the Grand Champion Recorded Grade honors. Fellow goat owner Deb Smeltzer of Bellefonte, who received many awards herself, helps Jeff show off his prizes.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

JUNE 28-JULY 4, 1982

Getting damp at camp.

Dog days begin this week Amelia Earhart disappeared July 2, 1937 First quarter of the moon June 28 (Mon) Average length of days for the week, 15 hours, 14 minutes Alewives start back to sea now Salvation Army founded this week in 1865 On July 4 the earth reaches aphelion and is as far from the sun as it ever gets — 94,479,300 miles

Ask the Old Farmer: An old-timer I knew used to refer to a boat anchor as a "killick " I never asked him its origin Do you know? WA , Block Island, R I

He really must have been an old-timer Haven't heard the word in years It's a stone, variously rigged in a forked stick to serve as an anchor The Chinese used them a good while before we ever thought of it

Home Hints Your cake will never stick if you use white sugar to flour a cake pan

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: Warm, with showers, at week's start, midweek is clear and warm, rainy, cooler for weekend

Greater New York-New Jersey: Cloudy and cool, beginning of week, sunny and pleasant, midweek, heavy rain, mild temperatures end week

Middle Atlantic Coastal: To begin week, partly cloudy and cool, rest of week is cloudy and mild, then rainy

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: First part of week is partly cloudy, warm, with showers east, weekend brings showers, hot temperatures

Off the Sounding Board

By Sheila Miller, Editor

That's not how it should be

As we say goodby to another June Dairy Month, we have to confess this has not been the best anniversary celebration for the industry

Faced with continued milk surplus production, increased competition from dairy imports and imitations, most dairy farmers admit they have had better months and years

Next Monday, dairy leaders from across the state will be meeting with Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell to try to formulate some acceptable solutions to the dairy situation. Since dairy farmers voted down the dairy promotion program last month, the leaders will have to look for other ideas with more down-on-the-farm appeal.

And government leaders in Washington continue to hear testimony on proposed federal programs to solve the national dairy dilemma Some, like Arlen Specter, have even called their own special sessions back home to get the farm industry's viewpoints on the problem

But there are other problems in the dairy industry besides pricing and overproduction One we find particularly aggravating is the regulations governing accreditation of herds for brucellosis and tuberculosis-free status

Dairy farmers who wish to join the ranks of cattle breeders who can export their animals with the least red tape strive for accredited herds. With this state-endowed status, farmers do not have to constantly hire veterinarians to visit the farm for blood and skin tests for each potential sale prospect Instead, one telephone call to Harrisburg's Bureau of Animal Industry sends the necessary paperwork to the farmer and the cow can be on her way

Now, all this sounds fine But, like any other government program which combines both federal and state regulations, things don't always go according to plan.

With automation to help handle all the herd and farmer records in the state, BAI has graduated to the modern world of the computer. But, this wonder machine is not infallible and has a tough time deciphering some of the information farmers send in.

For instance, take the case of a young dairy couple who were recently married, combined their accredited herds, and went into business on a nearby farm. Although both of the herds were deemed brucellosis and TB free when they were on separate farms, the young couple was shocked to learn they had lost their accreditation just by getting married and bringing the two herds together.

What had happened was the computer could not figure out how the newly-wed wife could have a herd under a maiden name And the forms for filing the information would not allow her to fill in both her married and maiden name What was easily understandable to a human was totally incomprehensible to the machine

Another problem with the accreditation system is the criteria which stipulates each herd must be tested annually for brucellosis — whether you have any animals of testing age or not

Take for example the case where a young dairyman had the ambition and foresight to start building his herd while still in school. He had purchased dry cows from previously accredited herds and brought them to his parent's farm to calve After freshening, the cows were leased out to nearby dairy farms while the calves stayed on the farm.

By the time the calves reached testing age, two years had passed When the young man checked with the state concerning his herd status, even though the calves should have retained the status of their mothers, he learned his brucellosis-free status had been lost. Why? Because he had missed testing animals one year.

When he explained that he had nothing to test because the cattle were too young, the state veterinarians told him the federal code of regulations specifically requires that animals be tested every year.

Rules are rules, as everyone knows But whatever happened to common sense?

Lastly, we believe there needs to be more cooperation between states when it comes to issuing and monitoring health charts on cattle. What meets the requirements of one state's Department of Agriculture should also qualify in another.

Not like the case where a dairy farmer with an accredited herd purchased a heifer at an out-of-state sale. Although the heifer had a "clean bill of health" when she entered the sales ring and later boarded the farmer's truck, the farmer later learned his state vets decided she wasn't "clean" enough.

To the farmer's dismay, his entire herd was quarantined because he brought this heifer home And now he must bear the expense of testing and retesting his cattle to requalify. If the original state's animal health bureau had done its job to satisfy our veterinarians, this farmer would have been saved plenty of aggravation and money.

This is not to say all the rules and regulations governing inter and intrastate movement of cattle are questionable and ridiculous. Quite the contrary, they are essential in protecting farmers against disease outbreak and epidemics.

But, if the rules need to be changed to add some common sense exceptions, then revisions should be made. Too often we just sit back and say, "Sorry, that's the way it is" rather than "Here's how it should be "

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BEGIN WITH THE LAST COURSE
June 27, 1982

Background Scripture:
Matthew 27:3-5;
Mark 14:10-11, 17-21, 43-46;
John 12:3-6; 13:21-30.
Devotional Reading:
John 12:1-8.

Remorse is often the bitter dessert that is served when we sit down to a banquet of consequences. Perhaps if we were to sample the just desserts first, we'd be motiviated to miss the whole sorry affair.

When we consider the story of Judas Iscariot, for example, we can't help wishing he had known in advance the terrible remorse he would feel later. If he had, it seems likely that he would not have betrayed Jesus.

Judas is a tragic figure, but his experience has much to say to us. He began as a trusted disciple, trusted enough so that he was made the treasurer of the disciples. He shared some important experiences with Jesus and heard from his lips the teachings that later would change the whole world — an opportunity of a lifetime!

Not That He Cared

Yet, it is obvious that something happened to Judas along the way that led him to squander that great opportunity. Why Judas betrayed Jesus is unclear to us today. The most obvious clue, according to the gospel records, is that Judas' loyalty was eventually eroded by his greed. Luke tells us that, when Jesus was anointed with costly oil in the house of Lazarus in Bethany, Judas complained at this extravagance, suggesting the money should have been spent to help the poor. But Luke hastens to explain to us that "This he said, not that he cared for the poor but because he was a thief, and as he had the money box, he used to take what was put into it."

Judas cared for Jesus, but apparently he came to care more for money and its power. Eventually, he sold-out Jesus for the sum of thirty pieces of silver. A terrible judgement on Judas, but what of us? We too care for Jesus, but is it possible that sometimes there is something else for which we care more? What is the price for which we are willing to sell-out our Lord?

See To It Yourself!

Some commentators have speculated that Judas never really meant to betray Jesus of that what he did was the result of a moment's weakness. Perhaps those interpretations appeal to us because we can identify with them. When we betray our Lord — and many of us do — it is often, not because we set out to do so, but because along the way something else becomes more important to us. Or, we may assume that our infidelity doesn't matter all that much.

Unfortunately, all too often by the time we realize the consequence of what we have done, it is too late for use to turn back the clock. Wracked with remorse, we find there is no one to comfort us. As the chief priests and elders responded to Judas' confession, "What is that to us? See to it yourself," so we find little comfort once our just desserts have been served.

If only we might learn to sample the last course first, we might avoid our banquet of consequences altogether.

Cholesterol question

I'm disgusted. Of all the places to find one of those untrue, outdated anti-cholesterol articles pumped out by institutions who should know better by now, I didn't expect L.F. to be one.

Even a "nutrition intern" should know that a high cholesterol level is not necessarily bad — that high density lipids versus low density lipids have been found to be the controlling factor in atherosclerosis.

And polyunsaturated fats have been found to possibly contribute to cancer.

I think you owe your dairy, beef, and hog farmer readers an apology for running a "canned" article without an editorial disclaimer.

Bob Corbin
Hampstead, Md.

Editor's note - Your criticism of the news release "Modified diet may lower blood cholesterol" which appeared in the June 12, 1982 issue of Lancaster Farming echoes the reaction most farmers have when someone mentions the word cholesterol.

As University of Delaware's intern nutritionist Susan Herman points out, "too much cholesterol may contribute to heart disease" but adds that so may high blood

To Control Flies

The good growing conditions we've experienced this spring for field crops also favor the build-up of fly populations. The abundant moisture presents ideal conditions for maggots to develop into flies. We suggest that livestock and poultry operators use residual insecticides on their building and pit walls to cut down on the fly problems. Also, you may want to use different materials at different intervals to break the cycle. Flies are immune to some of the old line materials but some of the newer materials such as Ectiban and Atraban are doing a good job. For laying hens, the newly approved Larvadex, as a feed through, is giving excellent results. Follow label instructions for rate of application.

One of the most important practices in keeping down the number of flies is to clean up the place, and eliminate fly breeding areas. Manure packs and other debris are good fly breeding places.

Good sanitation along with insecticides go a long way in keeping flies under control.

To Feed Dry Matter On Pasture

Pastures are very lush this spring due to favorable growing conditions. This means that livestock can utilize some dry matter while on pasture. This can include hay, straw or silage. With the dry matter present, they will pressure, heavy cigarette smoking, obesity, and physical inactivity. Her recommendations for a modified diet then were based on a doctor's diagnosis of high level of blood cholesterol.

Livestock producers, dairymen, poultry people, and even some nut growers bristle whenever nutritionists and doctors suggest cutting back on food that may contribute to heart disease, but for some patients a modified diet may be the difference between life and death.

According to the Nutrition Committee of the American Heart Association, "six decades of evidence have provided a considerable degree of certainty that the level of plasma cholesterol is determined by the intake of dietary cholesterol, saturated and polyunsaturated fat and total calories. The development, progression and regression of atherosclerosis are closely, if not causally, related to the resultant plasma cholesterol level."

In contrast, the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council points out "the evidence is insufficient to sanction a change in the present cholesterol and fat intake by the average American who is not a special risk for coronary heart disease."

And Cathy McCharen, director of Nutrition and Consumer Affairs for United Egg Producers, perhaps the industry most affected by the cholesterol scare, points out "research still hasn't answered the question one way or another concerning the relationship of dietary cholesterol to heart disease."

She reports the "official" advice to the public regarding dietary cholesterol is unchanged — "USDA/DHHS Dietary Guidelines still recommend that we avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol."

Until further research changes this position, it is our obligation to print both sides of the story.

"Play Bull?"

I find pages C2 and C4 of your June 12, 1982 issue of Lancaster Farming very obnoxious. Pictures of this nature do not give the reader any educational, spiritual or moral value what-so-ever.

In the short time that we have received the Lancaster Farming, we have purchased a lot of machinery from your advertising dealers, and have sold hay and machinery through it.

However, if you are going to turn your small farm paper into a gross, sexest paper, the Mast's can find the needs for their farm elsewhere. Perhaps you should rename your paper the PLAY-BULL.

I am sure that many examinations and or treatments of this nature are necessary for both human and animal bodies. But to print such trash in a family farm paper is absurd.

Ernest Mast
R3 Mayersdale, Pa.

Editor's note - In Donna Tommelleo's On the Road series, we attempted to feature four service people who are invaluable to the farming industry.

Her story and photos of veterinarian Dave Nirschl were an accurate depiction of a day in the life of one of farming's most respected professionals. Although their job is not always pleasant to observe, veterinarians are essential. A good veterinarian tops the list of welcome visitors on farms — usually they can't get there fast enough to suit the farmers.

Thankfully, these folks are dedicated to the veterinary medicine field, not many people would have the stomach for either the long hours or emergency operations. Through the care and concern prescribed in large doses by veterinarians, cows like the one pictured in the story do not go to slaughter before their productive life is over, whether due to an infected claw or uterus.

Lancaster Farming is a trade publication for the agricultural industry, and as such presents news and features realistically. A change of name would not be a change of heart, but to take on the title Play Bull would appear to be following the lead of a successful Canadian pork producers' magazine called "Play Boar."

Unnecessarily damaged

American farmers and ranchers have been damaged unnecessarily by unfounded dietary recommendation of the National Academy of Sciences that may reduce the risk of contracting many forms of cancer

The Academy recommended eating fruits, vegetables and whole grains daily and limiting consumption of fats and processed meats. They, basically, would have us return to the diet of 40 years ago when malnutrition and diseases caused by malnutrition were common.

In fact, livestock producers are now producing cattle and hogs that are lean and nutritious. Virtually fat-free meat is available in any grocery store.

The study also advised Americans to eat very little salt-cured, salt-pickled and smoked foods such as sausages, smoked fish and beans, bacon, bologna and hot dogs. Extensive research has failed to show a direct connection between those products and The Academy admitted that in a hasty, supplemental news release issued following the general condemnation of the American diet.

In fact, Americans are con-

consume a moderate amount along with the fresh grass.

The dry matter slows down the passage of the lush forage through the digestive system. Also, it reduces the danger of bloating when there is clover or alfalfa in the forage mixture. If the animals are out all of the time, then a portable hay rack would be the way to feed hay or straw. Dry matter intake is important when pastures are lush and high in water content.

To Clean Pesticide Sprayers

The use of various kinds of spray materials in one sprayer is risky. This is especially true when you are using any type of weed killer. In too many cases the sprayer carries sufficient residual weed killer material to injure a susceptible crop. Farmers who are spraying corn fields with weed killers one day and then spraying alfalfa or tobacco plants the next day with the same equipment had better do a real thorough job of cleaning the sprayer.

Some materials can be cleaned by using warm water and soap detergent. However, materials such as 2,4-D had better be cleaned with one pint of household ammonia in 25 gallons of hot water. Allow this mix to remain in the sprayer overnight and then spray it out through the system on the lane or driveway. Don't be guilty of harming good plants. One of the best practices is to have one sprayer for weed killers and another sprayer for other purposes.

To Control Potato Beetles

Many potato growers have learned that the Colorado Potato Beetles are thriving on the usual insecticides. This was the case last year and is again true this summer. It seems they have developed a resistance to Sevin, Malathion, etc. Commercial potato growers find that mixing Guthion and Thiodan, at the low rates, is very effective in controlling the potato beetle. For the home gardener, Imidan is best.

These beetles can defoliate a potato plant quickly, resulting in a weak plant and poor tuber development. Directions on the label should be followed at all times.

Report Supplied by USDA

Weekly 51 Cattle -

Through midweek slaughter steers 1.00 lower. Heifers 1.00-1.50 lower. Slaughter cows and bulls steady.

Fed cattle prices trended lower for the third consecutive week, following the lead of a 2.00-3.00 break in the dressed beef trade. Sharp early declines were partially recouped by midweek as salable numbers remained modest and buyers were forced to replenish depleted inventories. Some recovery in the beef trade also noted at midweek. Overall finish remained consistent with recent sessions, with many "short feds" offerings apparent in the consist. Consequently, heavier choice steers and heifers enjoyed the best of a selective and cautious trade.

Steers made up 45 pct. of the week's receipts; Heifers 40 pct; cows 11 pct; feeders 2 pct Four day receipts 7452; week ago 10138, Last year 10817.

There are a lot of reasons for using Bravo® 500.

And you can measure them in extra pounds, bushels and tons. Whether it's tomatoes, potatoes, celery, corn, watermelons, onions, cucumbers, cabbage, snap beans or squash. Plus 13 other food crops.

Bravo 500 fungicide delivers first rate protection against 52 yield robbing diseases on 23 food crops. From California to Florida... from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

Every extra pound, bushel and ton of quality production is one more reason for starting your season early with Bravo 500 and sticking with it all season long.

A regular schedule of Bravo 500 gives you the best disease control money can buy.

So make Bravo 500 your fungicide choice this season. All season. Because acre for acre and spray for spray, there's no more effective way to get bigger yields of better quality. And for a lot of growers, that's reason enough.

Bravo 500 from Diamond Shamrock. Wherever healthy vegetables and melons are grown, it's the name that keeps cropping up.

Kauffman's is favorite of natives & tourists alike

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

BIRD-IN-HAND — In its third generation of family operation, Kauffman's Farm Market along Rt. 340, east of Bird-in-Hand, continues to move ahead in direct agricultural marketing techniques while keeping a firm grasp on rich traditions from the past.

This opportunity for a look into the future while keeping the past clearly in sight at Kauffman's was one of the highlights of the two-day tour of the State Horticultural Association through York and Lancaster counties this week.

On a typical summer day, Kauffman's attracts a variety of clientele, ranging from native Eastern Lancaster Countians to the many tourists who visit the area.

"Our main business is still with the many local people," explains Kenneth Kauffman, orchard manager and one of five cousins involved in the management of the diversified farm marketing operation.

"But we're seeing more and more repeat business among visitors. And that's the name of the game – keeping people satisfied and coming back."

Out in the orchard, Ken points to the variety in the sizes of the trees that dot the landscape. They range from the direct ancestors of the conventional apple trees that grandfather Amos L. Kauffman began planting back in 1911, to the smaller semi-dwarf and now the much smaller dwarf trees that are grown on a trellis system.

"We just started putting the trellis dwarf trees in last year," Kauffman said.

"There are a little over two acres now, with 330 trees to the acre.

"This compares to 27 conventionl trees to the acre.

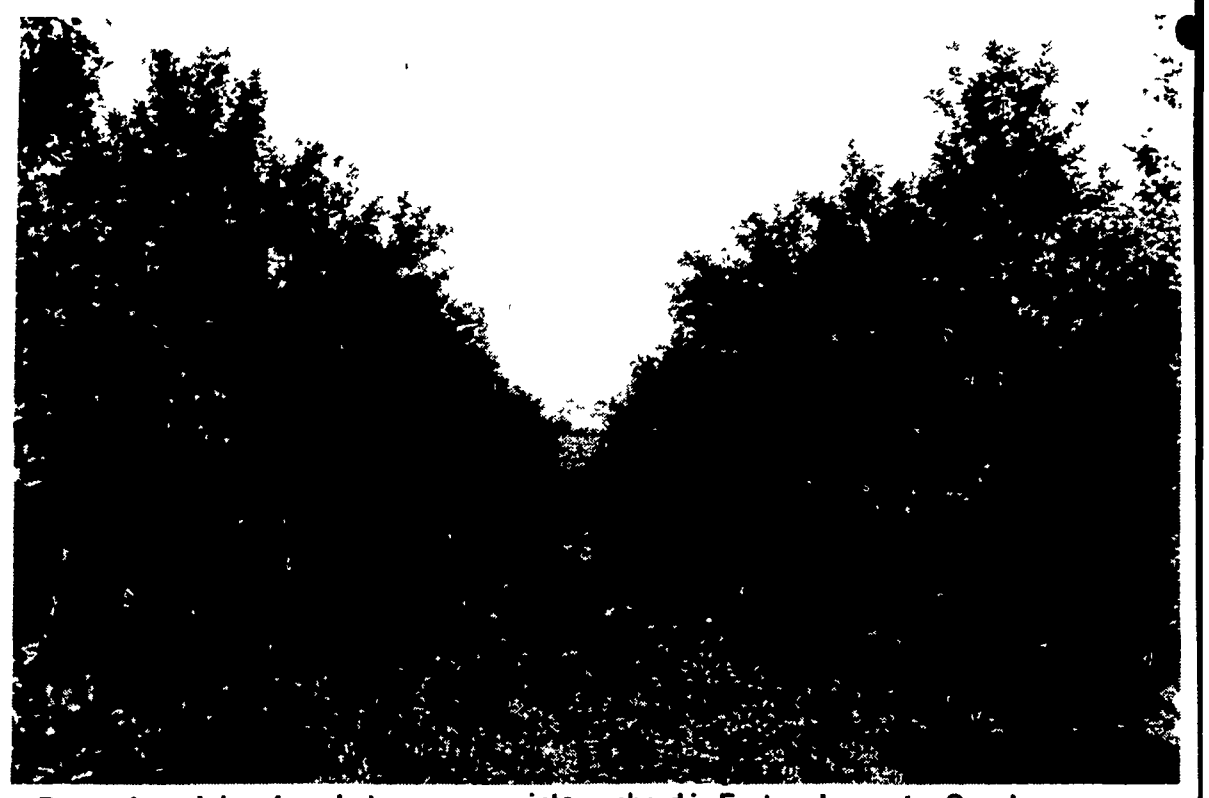
"It just doesn't make sense anymore to grow all of that grass around the trees."

Some of the Red Delicious dwarf trees, which were planted in April, 1981, already are bearing up to 18 apples. They are attached to the wire trellis with plastic ties since their root system will not support the early fruit-bearing capability.

The trees are planted eight feet apart in the row with 16 feet between rows.

"We'll be keeping our eyes on these dwarfs and comparing production and costs to the others," Kauffman said.

"It's hard to say at this point what five or six years down the road will bring."



Rows of semi-dwarf apple trees merge into the horizon at Kauffman's Farm Market orchard in Eastern Lancaster County.

Ken Kauffman examines 18 Delicious apples on trellis dwarf tree, which was only planted in April, 1981.

Balancing the extra cost of the trellis system and the labor to erect it are advantages of ease in training the tree to the trellis, early fruit bearing, and additional ease in spraying, pruning and harvesting.

"The dwarf trees also yield a higher percentage of extra fancy fruit," according to Kauffman.

"Since the trees are smaller, more of the fruit has better access to the sunlight."

Kauffman is expecting a pretty good year in the orchard.

"Winter kill in this area was at a minimum," he said.

"The fruits are sizing well and we're in pretty good shape.

"We should be heavier on apples this year and the peach yield should be about the same as last year or possibly a little less."

The Kauffman operation covers some 150 acres, with 75 in apples and 30 in peaches as the two big crops. There are a couple of acres in pears, with some plums, cherries and grapes, too. Another 30 acres are devoted to barley, corn and alfalfa for fattening steers and hogs as the winter diversification.

With all those apples, you know the Kauffman cousins, who also include David, Raymond, Paul and Samuel, will merchandise them in every way possible. With three-quarters of the apples going through the market, Kauffman's also features quite a cider-making operation in season.

The market has one of the few Schinko continuous cider presses in the state. Instead of the typical rack and cloth operation of the hydraulic press, the Schinko features a cloth belt that revolves around a drum. A series of rollers with decreasing levels of clearance press the apples.

Norm Kauffman, grocery store manager, is shown with automatic cider press, which permits Kauffman's to sell as much as 14,000 gallons a month in season.

The press feeds the cider into two holding tanks with a combined capacity of 700 gallons in the cold storage area, which provides storage for 20,000 bushels.

"We've sold as much as 14,000 gallons of cider in a month, as we did last October," explains Norman Kauffman, manager of the grocery store section of the market.

"Another popular feature of the store is the bulk food section.

"We bag 10,000 to 12,000 pounds of bulk items a month, including beans, noodle products, yeast, flour, sugar, rice, nutmeats, cereal and candy."

Dried fruits, particularly raisins and apricots, are other popular items.

A meat section and produce, including locally grown seasonal items, are also included in the makeup of the market.

The sprawling market building, the original section of which was built in 1939, also includes some 932 frozen food lockers. These are quite popular with Amish customers for frozen storage.

And out in the orchard area is about an acre plot of peas and sweet corn – almost lost amidst the varied trees. But it, too, is part of the rich tradition of the market.

Each year, the Youth Group of the Weavertown Amish Mennonite Church has a vegetable growing project which is sold through the market.

The proceeds from the vegetables go toward the church's missionary work.

And thus the rich traditions of the market extend even well beyond the Eastern Lancaster County area it primarily serves and the many tourists who shop its facilities.

Apple trees in Kauffman's Orchard are heavily leaden with fruit. Apple harvest is expected to be heavier than last year with peach crop about the same or slightly less.

First eastern show highlights RWDCA calendar

CRYSTAL SPRINGS — As a result of growing interest in Red and White dairy cattle, members of the Red and White Dairy Cattle Association soon may have their first eastern show in the Association's 12-year history, said RWDCA spokesman John Carpenter.

According to Carpenter, the show and sale are tenatively planned for April 9-10 at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

The show, which is expected to feature 75 to 100 animals, will complement the RWDCA annual spring sale, usually held in the Guernsey Pavillion in Lancaster.

"We're very happy with the sale facilities, but we can't really hold a show there," Carpenter explained. "There has been a growing desire for breeders to show their animals."

Previously, Red and White breeders' only outlet was the national show and sale held in Wisconsin each fall.

"All local shows do not have a class for Red and Whites," Carpenter noted.

For many Red and White breeders, the tenative eastern show is welcome news

"I'm pretty excited about it," said Ginny Davis, who along with husband Bill operate one of the leading Red and White herds in the nation with a rolling herd average of almost 21,000 on 70 cows

"I just wish the local fairs would go along with it," said the Bradford County woman. She explained that the Red and White cattle are not recognized by the Purebred Dairy Cattle Association.

"That's where the problem is," she said. Consequently, the Davises double-register some of their animals, with the Holstein Association of America and with the RWDCA Davis explained that her two sons can then show their animals with the black and white in youth competition.

For most Red and White breeders, show quality RWDCA-registered animals are not unlike the old saying, "all dressed up with no place to go."

Red and White membership has steadily increased at a rate of 15 percent each year said Carpenter In 1970, the RWDCA recorded 538 members which has grown to the 1982 projection of more than 8,000

According to Carpenter, most of the original RWDCA founders were Milking Shorthorn breeders Many of the breeders were familiar with the Red Holstein as a genetic color variation of the black and white Holstein breed and viewed these cattle first as a means to infuse new blood into the Milking Shorthorn breed and secondly as a promising venture in themselves

For a time, crossbred Red Holstein-Milking Shorthorn cattle were entered in an appendix registry of the Milking Shorthorn Society, but a growing awareness of the possibilities of pure red Holsteins led to the foundation of the RWDCA in 1964, Carpenter noted

From the beginning, the RWDCA has operated with an open herdbook This registration program accepts any dairy animal regardless of breed, age, or color A grade-up program requiring two crosses to a purebred sire for grade Holsteins or three crosses to a purebred sire for colored breeds allows breeders to grade-up to purebred Red and White status However, Carpenter explained that a breeder is not required to follow this grade-up plan in order to record cattle in the herdbook

'A lot of grade breeders aren't aware they are eligible for our program," said Carpenter

At this time, Carpenter noted that that about 50 percent of all registrations are black and white Holsteins and ten percent are animals of mixed breeding, usually Ayrshire, Guernsey or Milking Shorthorn. — DT

Northeast ag officials to meet in July

HARRISBURG — The top agriculture officials from eleven states in the region will meet at the Hotel Hershey July 11-14 to discuss issues of importance to northeastern agriculture, according to Pa. Agricultural Secretary Penrose Hallowell.

Hallowell said that the annual meeting of the Northeast Association of State Departments of Agriculture will focus on specific northeastern agricultural problems such as milk marketing and production, water resources and exports of agricultural products.

Hallowell, president of NEASDA, said the Association will formulate ideas for the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture annual meeting agenda in Iowa later this summer.

Hallowell said, "Most people think of the Northeast as an industrial region, but agriculture continues as an essential factor in the region's economy. Beyond the farm, many of the nation's food processing and distribution facilities are located in the region.

"Agriculture in the Northeast is based on the family-owned-and-operated farm and many of the problems faced by farmers in the Northeast are unique to the region. By working together and airing the needs of our farmers, we hope to make our counterparts and the federal government more aware of northeast agriculture."

The agricultural officials will be escorted on tours of central Pennsylvania farm and food processing operations on Monday, July 12 and Wednesday, July 14

Members of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee have been invited to join the tours on Wednesday to familiarize them with farm and market conditions in the region.

Kika de la Garza, chairman of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee will be the guest speaker at a dinner on Tuesday, July 13 at the Hotel Hershey. The dinner is being sponsored by NEASDA and the Lancaster County Chamber of Commerce.

Herman Stebbins traces early, first steps of A.I.

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — In Herman Stebbins opinion, only corn yield increases comes close to equalling the strides made in the dairy cattle industry in modern agriculture times.

'Some years ago, we wondered how long this dairy breeding improvement could continue," reflects the recently retired former president of Atlantic Breeders Cooperative. "Now we wonder why it shouldn't continue."

Stebbins, R22 York, has watched-and been a part of-the artificial insemination industry's growth almost since its beginnings.

In 1940, he began managing the Sinking Springs farm of the L.J. Appell family, which maintained both a Guernsey and Holstein herd. Breeding was generally done with the use of one herd sire, although Stebbins recalls that there were some "bull rings" operating among the Guernsey breeders.

Members of a bull ring would acquire several promising bulls, and circulate those individuals among the participating herds. While there was always a bull housed at each farm, rotating them allowed for a broader base of new breeding to enter the herds.

Earlier, a far-sighted Rutgers University Extension specialist named Enos Perry had become interested in European breakthroughs in the area of artificially inseminating livestock. According to Stebbins, those earliest A.I. uses were for horses, and not cattle.

Perry, a brother to York Countian Howard Perry whose sons and grandsons today operate Perrydell Farms Dairy near York, is widely recognized as the pioneering scientist who paved the way for today's A.I. industry.

In the infancy of the artificial insemination services in Pennsylvania, five bull stud organizations offered this new technology to progressive dairymen of the state. They were First Pennsylvania Artificial Breeding Cooperative, Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers, Southeastern Pennsylvania Artificial Breeding Cooperative, Northeastern Breeders Association and Western Pennsylvania Breeding Cooperative.

Southeastern, of course, was the forerunner of today's greatly expanded, and well-known, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, headquartered at Lancaster.

Dairy farmers initially using the stud services spent no time comparing charts and matching selective mating traits for their choice of bull.

"When you called out a technician for service, he'd use semen collected earlier from the "bull of the day." There was a limited number of sires, and each one was collected just once a week," Stebbins recalls. "Later, bulls were collected twice weekly."

Among those first Southeastern technicians who answered calls to the cooperative's members were Dave Yoder, today the general manager of Atlantic, and Roger Emig, who held the position of marketing director until his death several months ago.

After collection, semen was cooled with ice water, extended with a mixture of milk and egg, and kept refrigerated through the remainder of its day-long life. All semen unused at the end of the day was discarded as useless.

"Later, we discovered that the semen could be successful held in refrigeration for two days," chuckles Stebbins. "Now, that was a breakthrough back then."

Elected to the board of directors in 1945, Stebbins followed in the footsteps of York County's first director of the fledgling stud cooperative, Jonas Gruver.

Headquarters for Southeastern was a Landisville area farm, where several of the sires were housed in the old bank barn. A few were kept in a smaller shed separate from the main barn. Part of the farm home housed the laboratory and office, while veterinarian and cattle breeding specialist Dr. Robert L. Gutzwiller resided in the adjoining part of the house.

Of the seven or eight sires available from the organization, Holstein sire Lauxmont Admiral Lucifer is probably the best known Another popular early sire kept by Southeastern was Lauxmont Rag Apple Pilot. Both were bred from the noted Lauxmont Farms Holstein herd, pride of the Wrightsville dairy and breeding operation of York industrialist Samuel Laucks.

Because of the limited number of bulls, all were proven sires, and programs such as today's young sire samplings were unheard of. In

Hoffmans keep dairy life despite urban pressures

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

CALIFON, N.J. — Remember the story about the country mouse and his city cousin?

The grass may have looked greener on the other side but when they sampled each other's lifestyle they finally realized that there is no place like home.

"Everyone's not suited for dairying, but it suits us," said New Jersey dairyman Terry Hoffman.

Hoffman's farm is located in north Hunterdon County, an area rapidly giving in to urban pressures In the past 30 years, Hoffman has seen the area's 20 dairy farms dwindle to just three

Morris County, located just two miles north of Hoffman Holm, is becoming one of the fastest growing urban areas of the state, Terry explained.

"I can just see the future pressures from development," he said.

Terry noted that the "bedroom communities," that arise from the suburban sprawl are not supported by industry but instead, accommadate commuters from neighboring New York City.

Consequently, farming has become somewhat of an unusual lifestyle in this part of Hunterdon County. For that reason, Hoffman Holm recently was the sight of the county's annual Open House in honor of June Dairy Month On Father's Day they opened their doors to hundreds of curious "city cousins."

But as increasing numbers of "city cousins" call the borders of the Hoffman farm home, Terry and wife Karen make an effort to compromise their lifestyle

In 1977, Terry wanted to put in a feeder bunk and silo Before he called the contractors, however, he canvassed all his surrounding neighbors and asked if they would object to the expansion.

"Every neighbor said they would much rather smell manure from the farm instead of seeing more housing going up," Terry explained "I wasn't going to put it up if they complained."

"Our relationship with the neighbors has been very good. People certainly accept Terry," his wife Karen added. As evidence, she submitted his recent election win as township committeeman.

But Karen expressed anger that the farm may not be there in the future if their children — the fourth generation of Hoffmans — wanted to continue dairying.

"Terry's grandfather bought this farm in 1899," Karen explained.

"If we stay in farming," said Terry, "we intend to stay here." Depending on how much of the rapidly dwindling land the Hoffmans can rent, Terry said he expects to be farming for another 20 years.

And if land is getting harder to find for the Hoffmans, equipment parts can be as scarce as hen's teeth also. The Hoffmans explained that they drive anywhere from 12 to 20 miles to pick up certain parts.

"For anything major, we have to drive to Quakertown, Pennsylvania," said Terry.

Athough she wasn't raised on a farm, Karen doesn't consider herself a city girl. In 1968, she moved into the Califon area with Dawn, 17, Billy, 15, and Lisa, 12 her three children from a previous marriage. Karen maintained a small herd of dairy goats, which she showed, and sold eggs from the chickens she raised.

Twelve-year-old Lisa, when not in school, has the full-time responsibility of feeding calves and heifers. The Hunterdon County 4-H'ers also takes her turn with the milk bucket.

Karen offers a friendly finger to one of her nuzzling Nubians, while little T.W. is more interested in the photographer than the goats.

She married Terry about five years ago and has found life on a dairy farm most rewarding.

"You can't beat this life," said Karen. "I feel privileged that I can be a part of what life is all about." She said she enjoys the physical demands of a dairy farm.

"Half the people in this country are turning into marshmellows," she quipped.

Maintaining a family farm requires all members to pitch in and help. Karen explained she likes the responsibility that a dairy farm instills in people, especially children.

"And 'Dad's' around. The kids grow up knowing their father," she said.

In addition to Dawn, Billy and Lisa, the Hoffman brood now includes Amanda, 3 ½, T.W. 1½ (christened Terrence Wyckoff Hoffman, Jr.) and Dawn's son David 2 ½. In addition, Karen's parents Carmen and Irving Zuschlag, have moved into an adjoining house on the farm.

But unlike Karen, Terry has never known any other life than dairying. When he joined his father in 1969, Terry made a few colorful chan es.

"Dad always had Holsteins," Terry explained. "But we had always owned a few Guernseys. As a kid, I took a liking to their disposition."

Consequently, the black and white herd gradually gave way to the gold and although Karen and Terry still milk a few Holsteins, most of their 65 milking animals are registered Guernseys. In These future Hoffman milkers display their inate bovine curiosity. However, the calves didn't realize that they would be ogled by hundreds of curious city folks when the Hoffmans opened their barn doors to the public last Sunday.

Cattlemen examine Brahman x P. Hereford crosses

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The "Profit Potential" Crossbreeding Field Day attracted some 900 commercial and purebred cattlemen to Covington, La., for a first-hand look at the product resulting from crossing Brahmans and Polled Herefords.

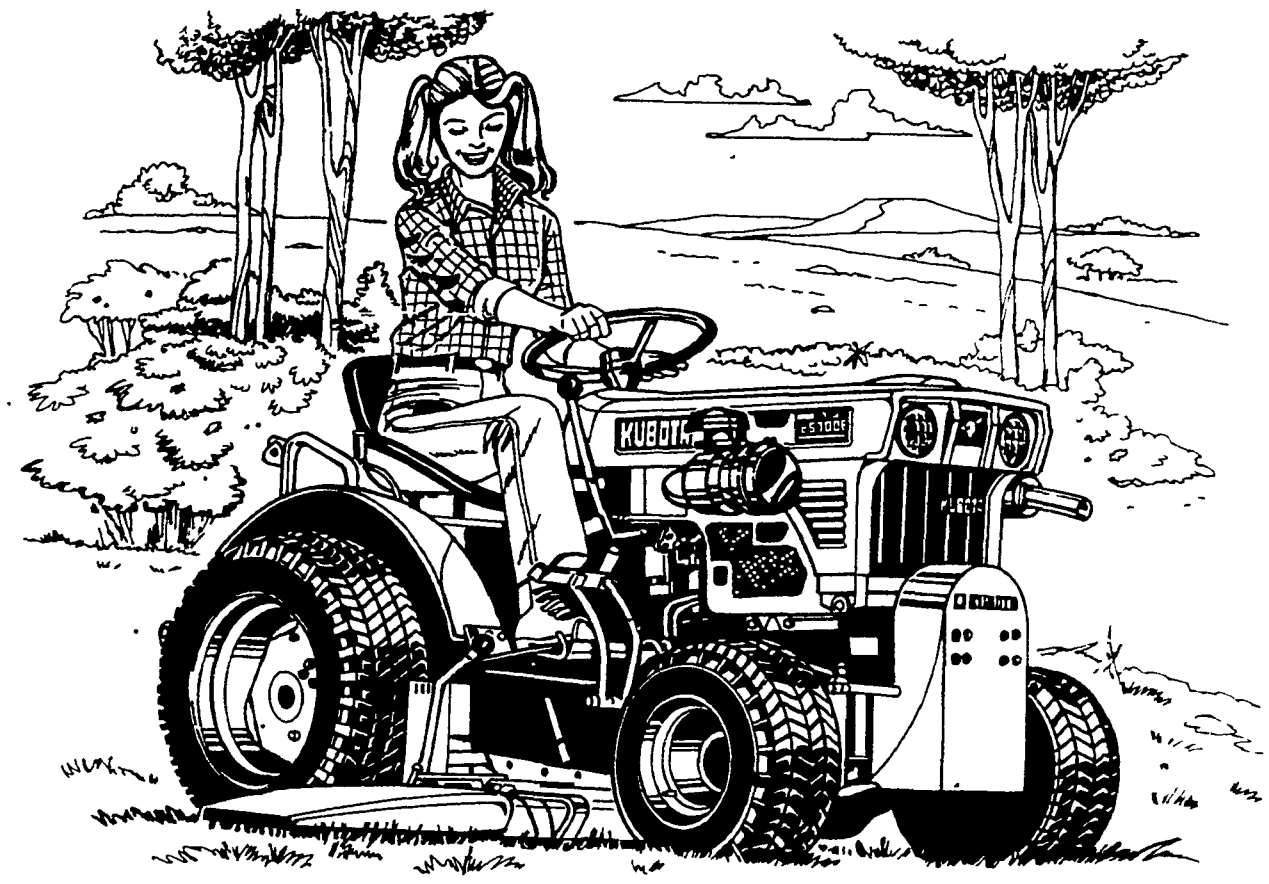
Hosted June 12 by Polled Hereford breeder Hermadel Ranch and Brahman breeder Bar M Ranch, program participants from various segments of the beef cattle industry agreed on the value of these crosses in commercial cattle operations. The day-long event drew a capacity crowd from Louisiana and surrounding states.

Speaking from his experiences in feeding Brahman-Polled Hereford crosses, Ed Bricker, Queen Creek, Ariz., noted their market acceptability, efficient feed conversion and lower death losses. "With feed and interest costs as high as they are, we've got to have cattle with total performance," he said.

Vicktor Jones, Polled Hereford breeder from Leslie, Ga., urged the field day crowd to apply practical performance testing to their herds, no matter what breed or cross.

"You can eliminate the guesswork," he said, "and today nobody can afford to produce those lightweight calves Feeders must have the genetic capability to make money and seed stock producers have the responsibility of providing superior genetics through progressive programs that meet those demands The commercial cattleman should insist upon performance records to reduce the guesswork in bull selection, and seed stock producers should provide the information. With breed associations' records programs and sire summaries available, there is no excuse not to "

HOME ECONOMIST.



Kubota built the thrifty little B5100 Tractor with economy in mind. But they didn't economize on its features.

It has a sturdy 12 hp 2-cylinder diesel engine, standard rear PTO, 6 forward and 2 reverse speeds, hydraulic 3-point hitch, independent rear brakes, differential lock, and your choice of two- or four-wheel drive. It can handle a mid- or rear-mount mower, rotary tiller, plow, disc harrow, and rear blade. Not to mention a tight budget.

Eastern HFAA delegates propose changes at 97th meeting

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

WICHITA, Kan. — For 1,500 Holstein enthusiasts, last week, the flat plains of Kansas provided the setting for the 97th Annual Holstein-Friesian Association of America Convention.

And although HFAA attendance was slightly lower than last year's Baltimore meeting, the bidding for black and whites at the National Sale reached near record levels.

According to HFAA spokesman Jim Yanizyn, a preliminary sale report on 123 Holsteins tallied $1,343,700 and averaged $10,974 compared with last year's record average of $11,748 on 108 head.

Delta-G Syndicate of Turlock, California paid $100,000 for a 6-month-old bull consigned by Gil-Tex Holsteins, also of Turlock. The sale-topper, Mr. Neutron-ET was sired by Gil-Tex-B Milkmaster-Twin and is out of an Excellent 91 Elevation daughter.

Two open heifers tied for the highest bids on a female. Turcree Bell Winner-ET pulled down a $31,000 price tag from buyer Curti Farms of Waukena, California The 5-month-old Carlin-M Ivanhoe Bell daughter was consigned by James N Leackie, Jr. of White Pine, Tennessee She is out of an Excellent 91 Glendell Arlinda Chief.

Odyssey Farms of Hillsdale, New York, took home the second $31,000 heifer. Wel-Brook Petes Alert Lass is a Straight Pine Elevation Pete daughter consigned by Paul Proeschel and family and Robert and Ruth Benedict of Camden, Ohio The 7-month-old heifer is out of an Excellent 90 Fleetridge Monitor daughter.

High prices also were the subject of a resolution offered by the Maryland delegation.

According to Maryland HFAA spokesman John Morris, the state's representatives proposed a classification fee schedule designed to head-off rising score costs. Maryland's proposal called for a $5 fee for registered cows and a $1 for checked cows. This contrasted with the HFAA's increased cost of $5 to check a cow in addition to the $5 fee for scoring a registered animal.

Furthermore, the Maryland delegation proposed that no charge be levied for cows not in condition. The delegation's remaining fee proposals called for $20 for a herd fee and $4 for scoring grades. For special classifications, Morris noted the delegation proposed $400 for herd fee, $8 for registered animals and $1 to check.

Although the final say for fee schedules rests with the HFAA board of directors, Morris noted that the 200-plus delegates voted 2:1 in favor of the Maryland resolution.

While the Maryland delegation scored a victory with the ballots another group of Marylanders won big in Junior Convention activities.

Four members of the Maryland Junior Holstein dairy bowl team bested eight other state teams to take first place in the dairy bowl contest.

"It was great We just wanted to shout it from the rooftops," said a happy Shirley Smith, committee member of the Maryland Junior Holstein Club.

The champion dairy bowl team included: David Grimm, 18, Jefferson; Gary Moxley, 19, Frederick; Don Moore, 19, North East; Mark Kruse, 19, Rising Sun.

After three rounds of questions and answers in single elimation competition, the Maryland team beat Ohio in the finals and ended with a final score of 249. Kansas, Indiana, Kentucky, Minnesota, Wisconsin, New England and Illinois rounded out the dairy bowl team entries.

North of the Mason-Dixon line, a few Pennsylvanians were honored for their service to the black and white breed.

HFAA Chairman Robert H. Rumler stepped down after 34 years of active service. The Franklin County native, who is also a Penn State Distinguished Alumni, has served the HFAA as assistant executive secretary, executive secretary, executive chairman and chairman.

Mabel Rishel of York County attended her 36th consecutive HFAA convention and received special recognition for her efforts.

"Springtime," was the theme of Mim Kauffman's painting which was entered in the art sale. The Elizabethtown woman's canvas featured the bucolic black and whites in a pasture and pond setting. Kauffman's husband Bob was one of a half-dozen Lancaster County delegates attending the convention.

He explained the Pennsylvania delegation proposed a resolution that called for blood-testing of animals registered after 2 years of age or older.

"At least one out of twenty-five animals, registered after two years old must be blood-tested at the request of the HFAA," said Kauffman.

The state delegation also recommended the HFAA take an active interest in milk marketing. Kauffman listed no specific marketing reccomendations.

"We left that up to the National Holstein Board," he said.

Locations for annual HFAA conventions are bid on by various states. HFAA spokesman Yanizyn noted that the association is booked almost into the 21st century. Next year's meeting is back east in Norfolk, Virginia.

Md. bull goes to ABC

DE FOREST, Wisc. — A young Holstein bull, J-L-Kinglea Captain-OC, bred by Jack King, Kinglea Holsteins, of Church Hill, Md., has been selected by American Breeders Service to enter their Progeny Testing Program.

He has been moved to that company's facilities at DeForest, Wisc., where he will join approximately 150 other bulls being tested this year. During testing, J-L-Kinglea Captain-OC will be mated to 700 cows in herds associated with ABS in their testing program, from all across the United States. After a four year wait, during which his progeny will be evaluated, a decision will be made as to whether or not he enters into regular semen production.

J-L-Kinglea Captain-OC was sired by Glendell Arlinda Chief, +$243, +2,010M and +60BF. His dam Della Elevation Carolyn has production records to 22,730 lbs. of milk, with a Cow Index of +1,419M.

EC reverses position on gluten

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A European Community trade panel's decision against limiting corn gluten imports from the United States is "welcome news to U.S. farmers, who have been frustrated by worldwide trade barriers," Robert Delano, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said last week.

The farm leader, who recently led a delegation to Community headquarters in Brussels and other European trade centers, said, "I think this shows our voices were heard when we told Community officials that any limits on corn gluten or soybeans would invite direct retaliation by our government."

EC agricultural officials previously had considered limiting imports of those commodities, which account for more than half of U.S. farm exports to the Community, and now enter duty-free and without quotas. Corn gluten, a by-product of ethanol production, is used as a feed substitute in place of higher-priced EC grains.

"During our mission to Europe," Delano said, "we were repeatedly told by EC officials that they did not want a trade war with the U.S. This development adds substance to their words." Corn gluten feed, he noted, comes into Europe "under the door in response to the EC farm policy which sets grain prices far above world prices I think officials there found, with our help, that there are even limits on limiting trade."

Delano said his organization would still press for an end to Community export subsidies, which are used to move farm surpluses into world markets and undercut competitors like the U.S

Leaker eggs cost industry $ millions

LANCASTER — Leaker eggs, or eggs with broken shells and membranes that open the inside of the egg to bacteria and other contaminants rendering them inedible, represent 1.1 percent of all the eggs produced in Pennsylvania per year or about 5 million pounds of liquid eggs, reported Penn state food scientist Morris Mast during last Thursday's Poultry Federation egg conference.

Although he didn't have a state dollar-loss figure for these damaged eggs, Mast said on a national scale leaker eggs cost the egg industry between $66 million to $165 million annually.

Because leaker eggs are not fit for human consumption, the majority of them are used as animal feed, in the manufacture of pet foods, or as fertilizer. Their dollar return to the farmer or egg packing plant ranges from zero when used as fertilizer to about five cents when sold for pet food.

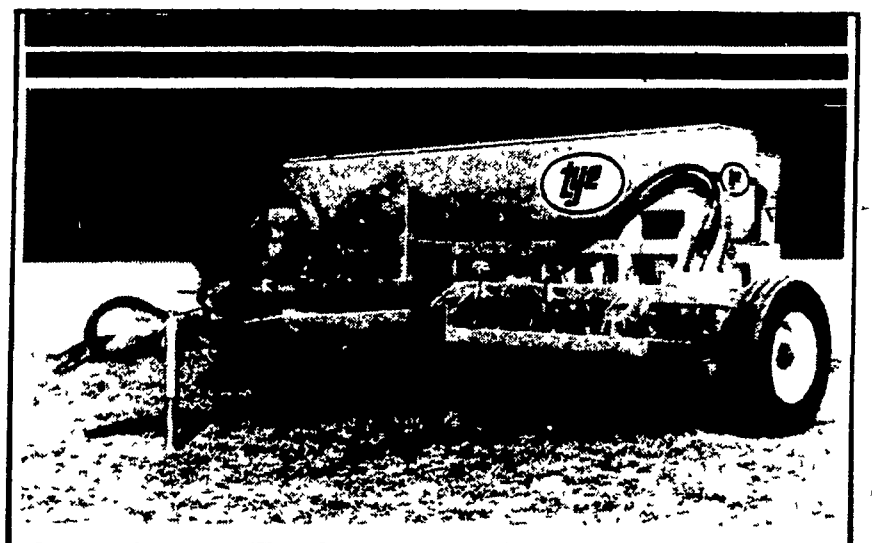
To try to offset some of this economic loss, Mast reported that Penn State has been conducting several studies, analyzing the microbial count of the leakers to determine if they can be made "acceptable for other uses." The food scientist stressed that he sees no potential for human consumption because the U.S. Department of Agriculture says "absolutely not." This adament stand, said Mast, is because of the potential threat of salmonella contamination.

In one of the first studies, Mast and associates studied the shells or normal, cracked and leaker eggs. In general, he said, the shells of leaker eggs were thinner and lacked uniform structure. "For every .03 millimeter difference in shell thickness, the change of breakage doubles," related Mast.

In an attempt to render the leaker eggs more usable, the Penn State scientists experimented with pasteurization. They discovered this process reduced the bacterial counts substantially.

Now, the scientists are drying these pasteurized leaker eggs and will be feeding them to broilers. They will be studying the effects this type of diet has on the resulting poultry meat.

"At this point we have no firm conclusions," Mast reported. "If we could determine how to reduce the numbers of leaker eggs, then we wouldn't have to find alternative uses." — SM



Introducing Tye's New 10 Foot Stubble Drill™

The convenient 120 inch planting width complements the Tye line, which includes the 80-inch Pasture Pleaser® and the 160 inch Stubble Drill™ Tye's end wheel, pull type design allows small tractors to perform large planting jobs

The new model is equipped with the same performance proven planting system that is standard on Tye Stubble Drill™ and Pasture Pleaser® models — • 10 Ft Pull Type, • Bubble Coulters w/walk board • 2x13" press wheels • flotation tires • acre meter

The new drill has fifteen openers with 8-inch row spacing and is driven by a center spring-loaded drive coulter, similar to the popular Tye Pasture Pleaser®

Herman Stebbins

order to be "proven," a sire was required to have five or more daughters, all of them often found in the herd of the breeder or bull owner.

"Farmers had to hope they knew cattle well enough to 'eyeball' a bull, and be able to pick out a good one based on his milking heifers," Stebbins relates.

Bull proofs, he says, became a valuable breeding tool when more daughters began to be available from several herds, a much more true indication of how a sire would transmit to a variety of cattle types.

Milk production, like bull proofs, has come a long way too, with the genetic building blocks available through artificial insemination.

During one of Stebbins early years of managing Sinking Springs a three-year-old from the herd claimed the state's top record for fat production, with a lactation butterfat total of 530 pounds.

Official records were made on AR or advanced registry, testing, comparable to today's DHIR records. A tester weighed the production of each cow during the first milking taking place after he arrived at the herd. Then, the official testing began, as the tester weighed production and drew samples on each herd member during the following two milkings.

Looking toward the future of the dairy industry, Stebbins foresees thousand-pound-fat herd averages, twice that of his early record-setter, are within reach.

"Farmers have more information that they can, and do, use. Feed companies are producing feed that isn't perfect, but it's getting close. And the important influence of breeding is more recognized. All this information has accumulated over the years, and we just know more about the dairy cow," he philosophizes.

Because of this mountain of information available to dairymen, Stebbins sees computers as one of the greatest boons ever to the milk industry, enabling voluminous amounts of information to be condensed into usable size.

"While artificial insemination has made the genetic material widely available, the rapid advances made in the dairy industry wouldn't have happened without computerization," he adds.

In a moment of prophecy, the former Atlantic president speculates that someday freeze-dried semen will further revolutionize the A.I. industry, just as the technology of frozen semen did a few decades ago.

He also looks to the day when dairymen's single biggest headache — heat detection — becomes a more developed and sure science.

"Heat detection is still the area where we probably need the most improvement, it's a major problem," says Stebbins. And, while reproductive break throughs will come about only through intense research, the government is not likely to spend dollars funding dairy herd research in light of continuing milk surpluses.

From industry research instead, Stebbins notes, is where the biggest strides in heat detection will come.

Within the purebred breeding industry, discussions often surface on the possibility of "narrowing the genetic base," due to intense use of certain top sire lines. Stebbins says he's not overly concerned about that threat, but figures that breed organizations and geneticists might give the potential threat some thought.

"Sometimes line breeding has worked in the past—sometimes it hasn't," shrugs Stebbins. "I can see that cattle could lose in strength and stature with too much line breeding, with possible loss in production or longevity."

But he expresses confidence that the resourcefulness of the dairy industry, should such a trend threaten, would respond before breeders' pocketbooks felt the pinch.

Atlantic Breeders Cooperative honored Stebbins upon his retirement earlier this year with a plaque containing the president's gavel, in recognition of his service to that office from 1967 to 1982. With his wife, Martha, a retired home economics teacher, Stebbins is looking forward to enjoying at least part of his well-earned retirement while enjoying the Florida sunshine

Look-alike calf, kids steal fans' hearts

LEESPORT — As the fastpitch softball teams — the Bank of Pennsylvania Sunners and the All Stars of Northwestern and Southwestern Berks leagues — rested up in the dugouts for the second game of Wednesday evening's doubleheader here at the Walt Pearson Field, the players had the best seats in the house for an unusual dress review.

Strolling out from behind the backstop and over homeplate came this year's eight dairy debutantes in their latest four-legged fashions. With costume designer giving each "model" an encouraging tug on the halter, the disguised dairy calves reluctantly lined up between third base and home plate for the judges' critical once over.

The calf dressing contest brought cheers and laughter from the softball fans and farmers who filled the bleachers at the ballfield as they rooted for their favorite calf and kids to win.

One contestant, in particular, won the hearts of everyone especially the Sunners' manager Rocky Santilli. Endearing itself to the crowd immediately, this Holstein decided to "slide" into the spotlight despite owner Donna Stump's efforts to keep the calf on its feet.

What made the 18-year-old's calf so popular was the fact that Donna had created a four-legged replica of Santilli's softball uniform, complete with sunglasses and cigar. The final-year 4-H'er received a special prize for her Rocky-Look-Alike calf costume.

The first-place winners in the calf dressing contest were barely old enough to dress themselves, but five-year-old Amy Phillips and sister three-year-old Laura enticed their four-week-old Jersey twin to cooperate, luring him to go along with the dress-up with a two-quart "baby" bottle. They even got some help from cousin Tracey Phillips.

Coaching the small-fry contestants were parents Robin and David Phillips and Cathy and Larry Phillips, Mohrsville dairy farmers.

Second place went to twelve-year-old Tammy Balthaser of Bernville. Her Holstein calf appeared to agree that the costume and calf-dressing contest were just people's way of "clowning" around.

Although all eight entries were

As 5-year-old Amy Phillips, right, keeps her eye on "baby" Jersey, the 4-week-old calf keeps its eyes glued on the bottle kept just out of reach by Amy's 5-year-old cousin Tracey Phillips. Amy and her sister Laura, 3, took first prize in the Berks Agri-Dairy Dairy calf dressing contest on Wednesday evening.

Eighteen-year-old Donna Stump created a prize-winning calf costume that captured the crowd's unanimous approval. Her Holstein calf was decked out in a softball players uniform, sunglasses and even sported a cigar which resembled team manager Rocky Santilli who posed with his look-alike.

Masonic Homes' goal leans toward self-sufficiency

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

ELIZABETHTOWN — There once was a time when the term 'self-sufficiency' was as commonplace down on the farm as summer following spring.

Farm families needed only to look in their backyards for the meat, eggs, milk, vegetables and hand-churned butter they needed.

Today, this practice is relatively outdated — with specialization being one of the keys to successful farm management, and grocery stores located just around every corner.

But, though the method is considered outdated by most individual farmers, it has not been scratched from the pages of farm management journals by some well-known, long-established organizations

The Masonic Homes in Elizabethtown — home to elderly Freemasons, their wives, widows or mothers and children sponsored by Freemasons, is just one organization whose underlying goal is toward self-sufficiency.

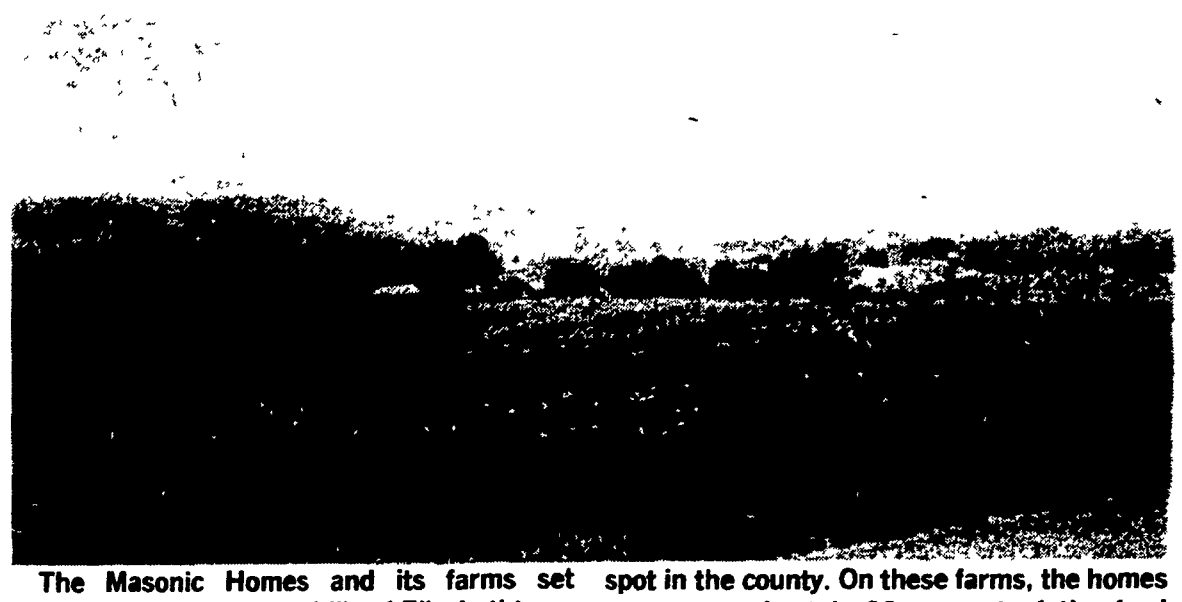
The reason, of course, is cost — it takes a lot of food to feed the 700 people at the Masonic Homes, three times, every day. And to cut down on these costs, the homes have everything from their own bee hives to strawberry patches, from 120 Ayrshires to 135 acres of orchards.

The Masonic Homes of Pennsylvania are set about one mile south of the square in Elizabethtown, rooted in 1600 acres of rolling Lancaster County farmland.

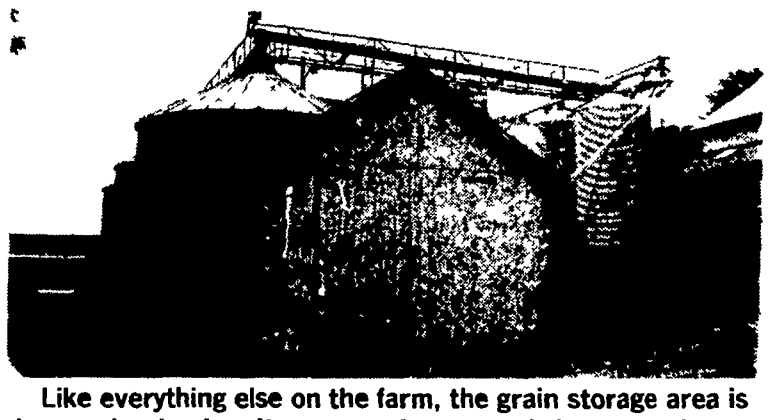
When the Lancaster County Conservation District decided to include the homes as one stop on their day-long conservation tour recently, we decided to travel along and learn about the inner workings of this vast outdoor "grocery store."

Guiding us on our trip around the grounds was Gerald Tracy, farm manager in charge of the 28 employees it takes to care for the 1736 acres of land.

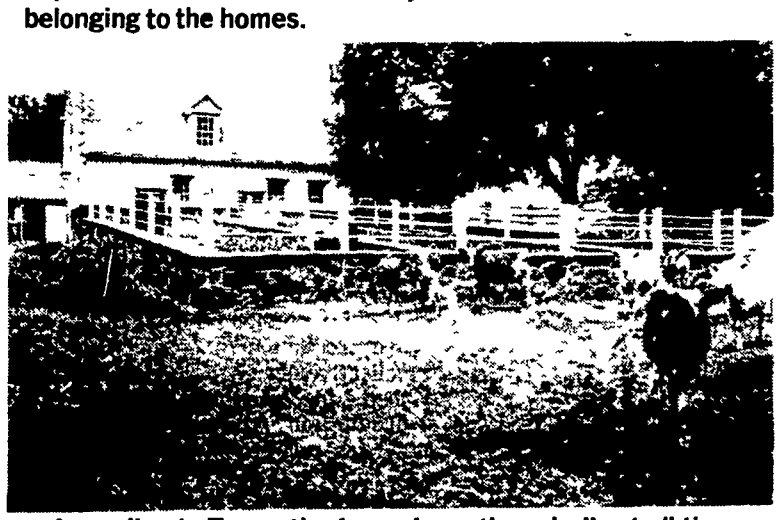
These farm workers are not only in charge of 260 acres of corn, 100 acres of alfalfa, 125 in small grains, 135 in orchards and 35 acres of vegetables, but they also must care for the 150 acres pasture and 100 acres of lawns which grace the monstrous buildings.



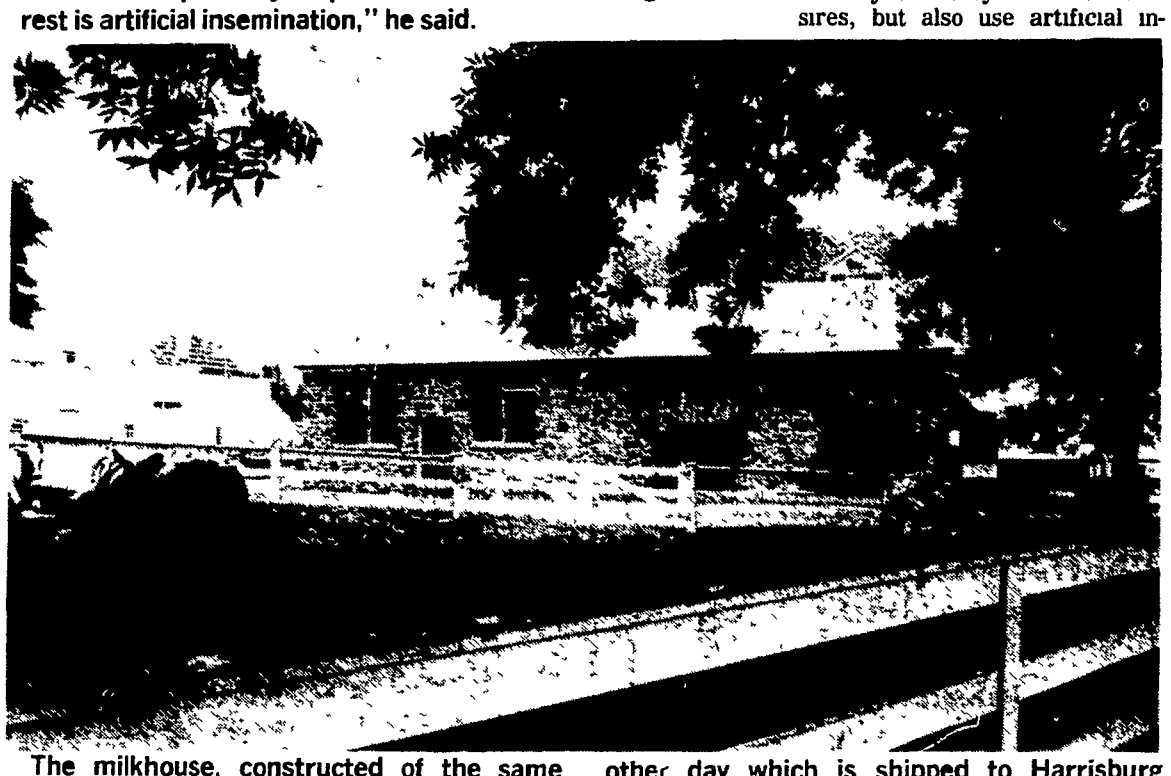
The Masonic Homes and its farms set peacefully on the rolling hills of Elizabethtown in northwest Lancaster — the second highest spot in the county. On these farms, the homes grow approximately 90 percent of the food their 700 residents consume.



Like everything else on the farm, the grain storage area is impressive in size. It rests on just one of the seven farms belonging to the homes.



According to Tracy, the farms keep three bulls at all times. Leading from the barn are three walkways made of stone which allows them to wonder from the barn to the outdoors at will. "We are probably 30 percent natural in breeding and the rest is artificial insemination," he said.



The milkhouse, constructed of the same impressive old stone that the barn and house boast, rests to the side of this barnyard where young Ayrshires frolic all day. Tracy said the bulk tank handles 9000 pounds of milk every other day which is shipped to Harrisburg Dairies. Behind the milkhouse sets a huge underground storage area where two acres of potatoes are stored.

It's interesting to note at this point that this small staff is responsible for feeding all 700 residents and yet overall, there is a total of nearly 600 full-time employees at the homes — almost a one-for-one relationship between employee and resident.

The homes include nearly 200 buildings, and according to Tracy, seven groups of farm buildings.

Their dairy operation is located in three areas. Though, in total, they keep nearly 225 Ayrshires, they milk only 120 with a herd average of 14,200 pounds Tracy said they ship 9000 pounds of milk every two days to Harrisburg Dairies where they are on contract to buy it back for the residents.

The Ayrshire breed was chosen for the homes back when the place was first established — 1913 — because at that time Ayrshire milk was considered "baby milk," due to its small fat globules. So doctors recommended using it for elderly people as well. The tradition has been maintained through the years, and said Tracy, they see no need or desire to change breeds. "We maybe even have one of the leading herds across the country," he added.

"We run the farms as a production unit, not a sideline venture of the homes. We still try to maintain top production goals in every phase of farming," he said.

"All the employees are obligated to maintain top production on their product. It's not an 8 to 4 job for them. If cows are calving at night, they're out there with them."

Tracy said they own their own sires, but also use artificial insemination. "We are probably 30 percent natural and the rest is A.I.," he explained. Their dairy operation also includes pipeline and free stall barns.

The beef operation consists mostly of an Angus/Charolais cross and according to farm manager Gerald Tracy, the homes slaughter two to three steers a week in their own slaughter house.

A drive over the 1736 acres of the Masonic Homes features a beautiful sight such as this one around every corner. The Ayrshire breed was chosen for the farms around the time the homes first opened - 1913 - because it was considered baby milk due to its small fat globules.

In addition to their diverse dairy operaton, the homes maintain a herd of 100 beef cattle, 50 hogs and 10,000 layers. They have their own slaughter house which handles 10 hogs and three steers a week.

The hogs are a Yorkshire/Landrace cross but Tracy said they are coming back to the Duroc breed with Duroc sires.

The beef operation consists mostly of an Angus/Charolais cross. But Tracy explained that the homes buy feeder cattle from the Lancaster Stockyards to fulfill their needs.

"Our primary goal is to grow and raise what we need here. The best quality products go to guests and the excess we might end up selling," he said.

One place they sell the excess is right on the grounds — they have a food store which usually handles the excess fresh fruits and vegetables. Another selling favorite is cider.

Six or seven varieties of apples are grown on the grounds with the favorites being Red Delicious and Golden Delicious.

"We also grow our own peaches, pears, cherries, strawberries, corn, asparagus, potatoes and lots of other vegetables," Tracy said showing great pride in his staff.

"I'd say we grow about 90 percent of all the food consumed on these farms. In its early stages, the homes were nearly 100 percent self-sufficient," Tracy explained.

According to a pamphlet distributed by the homes' information office, the enterprise annually produces approximately 20,000 gallons of canned vegetables, 13,000 gallons of preserved fruits, 18,000 gallons of frozen fruits and vegetables, 450,000 quarts of dairy products and all of the meat consumed.

Aside from the processed foods, nearly 12,000 bushels of apples, large crops of peaches and pears, and 1500 pounds of honey are produced. According to Tracy, there are 45 bee hives.

Annual egg production is nearly 175,000 dozen from the 10,000 layers. In addition, nearly 12,000 broilers are raised yearly for the homes' consumption.

Tracy has been working at the homes for two years now and said he loves the job. He and all his full-time staff members are given homes right on the property to allow them to be near their work at all hours.

Gear pricing system to market, says Crews

COLUMBUS O. — NAJ Assistant Secretary Guy M. Crews was on hand at the 24th Annual Meeting and offered the following report to attending Jersey breeders.

We are sated by the proclamations of overproduction, underconsumption, lack of uniformity of fluid product offered for sale to consumers and last, but not least, the specter of imitations.

As to these challenges, we can take a measure of pride in the position and policies which have issued from the American Jersey Cattle Club and National All-Jersey Inc.

Overproduction is, in large part, the result of faulty pricing signals sent to the American dairy farmer. The administrators and originators of the pricing system in federal milk orders are directly responsible for production of "more and more milk" regardless of nutritional composition. There is no way that this stigma can be lifted until pricing systems become "market oriented". To this end, the Jersey group represent a plead for a truly realistic method of pricing that will sustain our industry of milk production into the future. In addition, there must be some sort of restraint placed on overall milk production.

We realize that this proposition of production restraint is not a popular alternative with some dairy farmers. But, with the highly perishable product that we deal in, there must be some mechanism to tailor supply to demand. Without that supply-governing mechanism we will be forever beset with an accordian effect on production that can be financially quite traumatic. The current situation amply illustrates this.

In this area of production control, we must be mindful of the effect of government regulation and edict. The only way I can think of to soften the impact of political vacillations and vagaries is to produce no more and, better still, less product than the "apparent" market can absorb.

Underconsumption is a problem. The Jersey community has some opinions about this that are constructive. Jersey producers generally support an accelerated advertising and merchandising program for dairy products.

More significantly, they support the proposition of higher minimum standards for milk. In light of the California experience which reflects increasing per capita consumption, it is difficult to understand the mental process of those who oppose higher standards. There are some opponents, but generally they represent interests with only a minimal investment in the dairy industry as contrasted to the 90 percent investment of dairy farmers.

Imitation dairy products pose a threat to our industry. But, I can think of no food product that is not beset with this same plague. It is up to us to produce natural, "real" dairy products that are consistantly high in quality and uniform. So long as these competitive products are "imitations" it is still axomatic that the original product is the most desired by consumers.

For example, margarines that claim to taste like real butter, or aerated dairy whips that purport to be from real dairy origins and cheese items with substitute fats that make pseudo health claims for the virtues of coconut oil, corn oil, etc. when combined with real milk products are before us.

These attitudes and policies of the Jersey community are like the sound of a cannon shot in a vacuum - nobody hears - unless we actively involve ourselves in the marketing process.

American dairy farmers are the most efficient in the world. Our knowledge of husbandry, nutrition, genetics stands second to none But, our involvement in the selling process is all too minimal!

the use of the word "minimal" as it relates to the marketing efforts of dairy folks may seem improper since so many of us are actively involved in the process. The word "minimal" however, suggests that there is much more than can be done.

The action that can be taken, with maximum effect, is for dairy farmers to individually become more involved in the marketing of their product. This involves a number of positive actions.

It suggests that each dairy farmer should take active vigorous interest in the conduct of the affairs of their cooperatives This interest should not necessarily take the form of criticism, unless warranted, but should rather be a positive input to policy decisions which will than give co-op leadership clear cut policies to pursue. Cooperatives control the marketing of about 85 percent of the nation's milk output. If properly guided and managed, these organizations can control the destiny of the industry

It suggests that we should demand and expect more sympathetic interests in our affairs on the part of regulatory and elected officials. In my 35 years in the dairy business, I have seen regulatory officials retire from government service without having contributed more to the interests of those they supposedly serve than their maintenance of the "status quo," "keep things as they are," "no changes needed." A great deal of the present crisis of overproduction stems from the failure of the federal order system to respond to visible need for change in pricing methods.

It suggests that we must not be quite as patient as marketers as we are in our role of agriculturists Patience is a hallmark of those who earn a living from agriculture A nine-months gestation period, a further two-years of waiting for the heifer to freshen - then and only then can we determine whether a breeding decision was right or wrong. If you didn't have patience, this alone would ruin your nervous system.

But patience cannot be equated with the urgent, immediate need for change in this dynamic world of food technology. We must support more innovative research The wheel has already been invented - let's go on from there. Advertising is an effective sales tool. Let's use it with more imagination.

Finally, let us take action to speak with a unified voice to the political establishments which have such great impact on our industry. For example, there is little dispute that we will not voluntarily solve this problem of overproduction by individual and collective decision. There remains then, the need for compulsory production control. The administration labels this "unAmerican." The administration is counting votes, not necessarily concerning themselves with the best interest of dairy producers. Why cannot dairy folks insist on and get the needed regulations to solve our problem? A unified voice is imperative.

Don't tell me your answer — tell it to your co-op leadership, your elected representatives and to the regulatory bodies who purport to safeguard both producer and consumer interests. They make so many of the decisions which affect us and we must take an active part in the decision process!"

"Big Weekend"

Association's spring meeting, production awards were presented to a trio of Pennsylvanians. John Merkle of Stormstown was honored for the highest one-day test. The highest butterfat award went to goat owner Anne Whitney of Moscow. Furlong farmer Anne Miller had the highest milk production.

Six Grand Champion awards were handed out by judge Jay Coburn, Montague, N.J., during the Youth Open Doe Show on Saturday. More than 100 young people showed their projects.

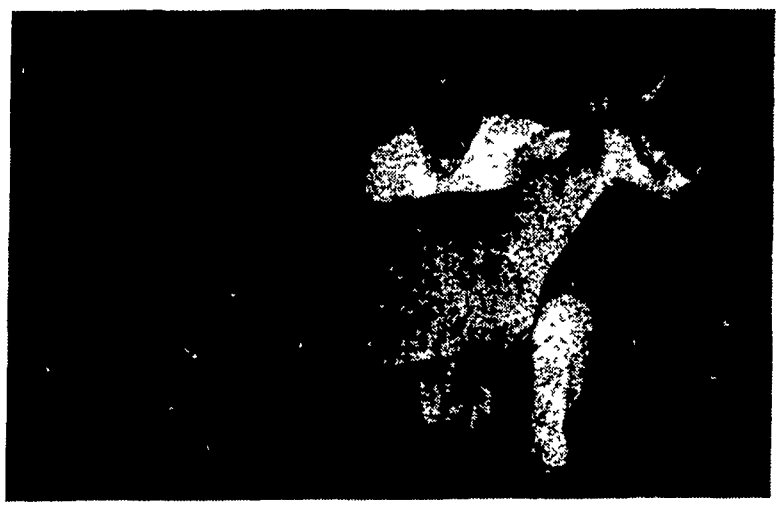
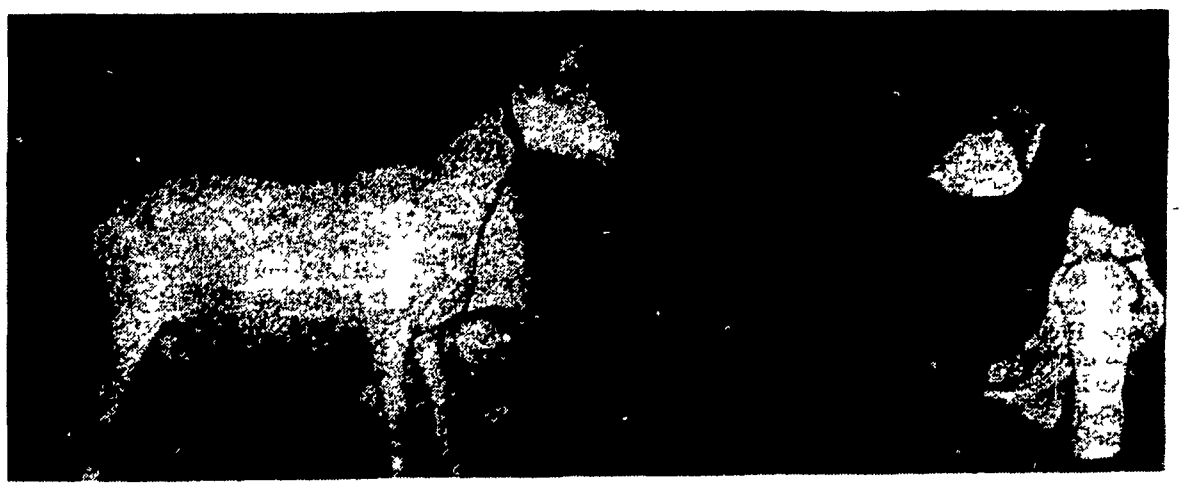
The Grand Champion Nubian was "Shalve K Kelita," owned by Rex Bohn, Alloway, N.J./Bohn was also the Champion Showman. Deb Smeltzer of Bellefonte received a trophy for champion fitter, while her goat, "Eight Acres CR Naiomi T.M.," was chosen Grand Champion French Alpine.



Deb Smeltzer of Bellefonte and her dairy goat captured the Grand Champion Alpine and Grand Champion Fitter awards.

The PDGA, at it's 5th Annual "Big Weekend," chose Michelle Haines of Honey Grove as its Youth Representative. The 15-year-old girl will attend dairy functions as a "Goodwill Ambassador" for the goat industry.



Melissa Rimstidt, Pine Bush, N.Y., and her Saanen goat, along with Tammy Spitler of Newmanstown and her LaMancha, pause for a picture during the PDGA shows and milkout last weekend in Huntingdon.

Double honors also went to Jeff Hockenberry, Clear Spring, Md. His goat, "G.C.H. Windy Vues Black Beauty," was the Grand Champion Recorded Grade and the Best Doe in Show.

Sunday's Junior and Senior Doe Shows saw many of the goat owners taking highest honors in both.

Best Doe in the Junior Show was bestowed on the Grand Champion Alpine, "Hilco S.S. Prelude," owned by Teresa Wigle of Keymar, Md. Delores Peifer of Herndon showed the Grand Champion Toggenburg, "Spruceup Misty Dawn," and the top Recorded Grade, "Spruceup Sweet Delight."

Other Grand Champions included: LaMancha—"High Point Princess Brown," owned by Daisey Gucker of Finleyville; Nubian — "Horse Shoe Acres J.D. Alexis," owned by Sally Rehrig of Lehighton; Saanen—"Mustang Hyacinth Silver Locket," owned by Joyce Birk of Sayre. Jeff Hockenberry showed the Best Baby Doe, "Windy Vue Let Fri-Dee."

In the Senior Doe Show, once again in Alpine owned by Teresa Wigle "Hilco D.S.R. Shindy Sheila," captured the Best Doe in Show as well as the Grand Champion for that breed.

The PDGA also presented top honors to the following: LaMancha—"Laurel Ridge Daffy's Luv," Tammy Spitler; Nubian—Anne Whitney's Winterberry M. Bonjour Babette;" Saanen—"Gay Mor's Buckley Princess," owned by Joyce Birk; Toggenburg—"Sweet Castle Snickers," owned by Anne Miller of Furlong. The Recorded Grade Grand Champion was "Thistler Run Dusty Pheobe," owned by Doug Vogtman of Smock.

Dana Holder of State College judged the 240 goats in the Junior and Senior Doe Shows. She also judged the 93 bucks entered in the weekend competition.

Show chairman and president of PDGA, Danny Harter of R2 Bellefonte, makes it his duty to tell others dairy goats are productive animals. Harter, along with the other goat farmers, is on a campaign to "clean-up the dirty name that goats don't deserve." Harter says, "Goats are no longer a backyard tragedy."

PDGA boasts 150 members. This year's annual weekend gathering was the biggest in the Association's history. Harter says he expects participation to increase even more as the industry grows. After spending four years in Reedsville, he expects to see the annual weekend remain in Huntingdon for several years, because of the excellent facilities.

"The dairy goat industry is about 20 years behind the cow industry," confesses the PDGA president. However, he added that because of the progress cattlemen have made, moving ahead will be easier for goat owners. Harter exclaimed that people can no longer make fun of goats and that if those who love the industry work together, respect will come quickly for the dairy goat industry.

Though the employees must tend to all 1736 acres, only about half of it is in production according to Tracy; but the other half — in lawns pastures, and wooded areas — must also be taken care of by his staff. They are also in charge of landscaping and the greenhouses

The tables in the dining room are adorned with fresh-cut flowers form the greenhouse everyday On special occasions, such as anniversaries and holidays, individual residents often receive a bouquet of flowers

Though they constantly hire part-time help, Tracy said they never allow residents to help farm, although some do enjoy walking out to the fields and watching the work and visiting the barns and petting the animals

As with the other buildings on the grounds, the farms are open to visitors and the staff, which we found to be quite friendly and proud of the work they do, and are always ready to discuss their work and their production practices with a curious farmer or consumer

TIRED OF CLEANING AND REFILLING SUPPLEMENTARY FOUNTS?

SWISH watering systems

SWISH WATERING SYSTEM IS THE ANSWER!

Their chick-size waterer solves man-size problems.

New SWISH SATELLITE™ system waters chicks and poults from day 1

The biggest problem with founts and other supplementary waterers is manpower — the labor needed to clean and hand-fill them. Also, birds don't always get clean, cool, fresh water — which can cause health problems and poor feed conversion.

But now there's the new Swish SATELLITE system.

It attaches to any Swish floor watering system (and most other brands, too), to give you an automatic system that baby birds take to immediately.

And your birds get fresher, cleaner, cooler water that they love to drink. Which means they'll drink more of it. And that means healthier birds.

The Swish SATELLITE also cuts water waste — which means drier litter, less disease.

Whether you're choosing Swish's new SATELLITE system or a complete Swish system to take birds all the way to market, you get the same patented pressure-operated long-life Swish valve. It's known for its trouble-free performance, its durability.

And you get the unique Swish self-cleaning cup. It saves you lots of trouble and the labor cost of frequent cup cleaning. That's because of the patented feature that causes a "swishing" action by the water from the valve. This lifts any feed particles in the bottom of the cup so birds can consume them.

Get the whole story about Swish's new SATELLITE system ... also systems for adult birds.

Agri-Dairy Day

winners, only the top three received cash awards. But, for their crowd-pleasing performances, all the contestants received a prize.

To top off the evening, celebrities from local radio and television stations participated in a milk-off. Facing the three milking Holsteins generously donated for the event by dairyman John Stump, were Ross MacCallum of TV 15, Bob Minnich of WHUM radio, Charles Adams of WEEU radio, Susan Shapiro of TV 8, Steve Haage of WHUM, and Franklin Trexler, editor of Eastern Financial Times.

A grudge milk-off found Berks Dairy Princess Helen Seidel matching milking maneuvers with Sunners' third baseman Steve Moore. Helen called "foul" as Moore slipped in a few more squirts after time had been called, and then tipped the scales in his favor by pouring other contestants' milk into his bucket. The outcome of this contest had to be called with "no runs, no hits, but plenty of errors."

In the "serious" contest, it was the bankers who were "in the money" when it came to milking. Walter Morrissey and Ezekiel Ketchum, both of whom had never milked a cow by hand before, walked away with top honors.

Coming in a close second were Susan Shapiro and teammate Charlie Adams. After her two-minute introduction into milking cows was over, Susan commented, "It takes a lot of strength to milk a cow. My arms hurt."

"That's why dairy farmers have milking machines," commented a knowing Helen Seidel.

Shapiro said her veteran-like technique was the result of advice from dairy princesses and experience gleaned through Farm Show coverage.

When asked if he ever thought his cows would recover from the celebrity treatment, Stump said, "I guess it's no worse than any other show."

Proceeds of the Berks Agri-Day will go toward the 4-H Community Center. It is estimated that approximately $1,500 was raised. Sponsors for the event included: Berks County Dairy Farmers' Association; Berks County 4-H; Bank of Pennsylvania; American Dairy Association; and Clover Farm Dairy.

Getting ready for the calf dressing contest was almost as fun as competing for 4-H'er Steve Rohrbach of Shoemakersville who got a helping hand from parents Alton and Joan Rohrbach in fitting his Holstein beach bum with swim trunks, towel and innertube.

Winning second prize in the calf dressing contest at Leesport's ballpark was Tammy Baltheser of Bernville and her not-so-happy Holstein clown.

U. of Md. ready for orchard tour

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Workers at the University of Maryland's new agricultural research and education center near Sharpsburg, Washington County, will host their first public open house next Wednesday.

Wagon-tour inspections of research and educational activities will get under way at 9:30 a.m., according to Christopher S. Walsh, Extension fruits specialist and assistant professor of horticulture at the University of Maryland in College Park.

Lunch will be served at noon on the farm by catering service at a cost of $6 per person, Walsh said, adding advance reservations are requested. Telephone reservations may be made by calling the Sharpsburg research farm during forenoon working hours at 301/791-2298.

After lunch, the tour group will move on to tour the West Virginia University research orchards at Kearneysville, W. Va., about 20 miles from the Sharpsburg farm.

During the morning wagon-tour program at Sharpsburg, the following stops will be included:

— Comparison of spur-type apple trees on various rootstock;

— Insect and disease control in apples, peaches and grapes;

— Summer shearing of apple and peach trees and its effect on vigor and fruit yields;

— Bramble fruit breeding, culture and management. Searching for rust-resistant varieties of black raspberries;

— Diseases causing decline in fruit orchards.

The annual summer tour is sponsored jointly by the Maryland State Horticultural Society and the University's Cooperative Extension Service.

The University's Western Maryland agricultural research and education center is located south of Hagerstown off highway 65 on Keedysville road in the Keedysville-Sharpsburg area. It is about six miles south of U.S. highway I-70 at its junction with highway 65 near Hagerstown.

Hallowell calls dairy meeting

HARRISBURG — State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell has invited 32 dairy industry leaders representing state milk marketing cooperatives, farm and dairy organizations to meet in Harrisburg Monday to seek alternative solutions to the dairy surplus problem.

Hallowell said, "A grave imbalance continues to exist between milk production and consumption. Family dairy farmers, milk dealers, consumers and taxpayers are all paying the price of this imbalance.

"Individual dairy farmers and industry leaders are all in agreement that something must be done to reverse current trends. However, no plan has yet been reached on steps that can be taken in Pennsylvania," he said.

Hallowell asked the dairy leaders to bring ideas to the meeting for exchange "By looking ahead, we can preserve Pennsylvania's important dairy industry. To do so, however, will take cooperation and commitment from us all," he said.

Hallowell said that several alternatives or combinations have been proposed already, including stricter labeling of milk and dairy products, improved inspection and quality requirements, increased emphasis on exports of dairy products, passage of new standards for high protein milk, and promotional efforts for milk and dairy products through retail outlets, restaurants and food service operations. These and other possible alternatives will be discussed at Monday's meeting in the Agriculture Building

N.Y. judge dismisses NEDCO conspiracy case

SYRACUSE, N Y. — Acting Supreme Court Judge Bernard L Reagan, recently tossed out conspiracy charges against the Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation and four other major milk companies.

"We consider the judge's decision a major victory," exclaimed James McVety, NEDCO attorney.

The formal charges were made public in March by New York State Attorney General Robert Abrams when he accused NEDCO, Glen and Mohawk Milk Association, Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., Tuscan Dairy Farms, Inc. and Oneida-Madison Milk Producers Cooperative Association with "collusion and conspiracy" to restrict dairy farmers from a "free market" to sell their milk.

Using legal precedent under provisions of New York's Donnelly Act, Judge Reagan dismissed the attorney general's $5.4 million anti-trust suit against NEDCO and the others. The complaint sought $1 million in damages against the five dairy corporations and $100,000 against co-op executives.

Citing a previous case, Margrove Inc. versus Upstate Milk Cooperative, Reagan adhered to the precedent ruling, which determined that the courts are not empowered by the legislature to judge the actions of cooperatives under the Donnelly Act.

"This was not a matter of being right or wrong but a matter of law," said NEDCO attorney McVety. "Under the law, cooperatives and those parties dealing with the cooperatives are exempt from New York State anti-trust laws. We consider the judge's clear-cut decision of vital importance to cooperatives and their members who must be assured protection under the governing anti-trust laws of this state."

However, a spokesperson from Attorney General Abram's office said Abrams is expected to appeal the decision and will file within a month.

"Hopefully, upon reflection of the decisive action taken by the judge, the attorney general will reconsider his desire to appeal and drop any further consideration of this matter," McVety said.

In January 1982, NEDCO, a cooperative federation with 64 member cooperatives, acquired the Fraser, N.Y. manufacturing plant from Dellwood Foods, Inc. According to Abrams' allegations, NEDCO had earlier conspired with several area milk dealers to force the 750 former Dellwood shippers to sign on with the cooperative.

The court's decision was handed down nearly four months after the papers were served on NEDCO at its Syracuse headquarters.

"What really is tragic is that most of the court costs and legal fees are not recoverable," said McVety. "This is a waste of NEDCO dairy farmers' money even though an important victory was won.

Macri disperses Guernsey herd

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — The complete dispersal of the 60-head Guernsey herd of A.C. Macri, Jr., Hunlock Creek, Pa. was held June 16 at the Guernsey Sales Pavilion, Lancaster.

Macri, who established the herd in the late '30s, was forced to sell the herd due to the loss of his milk market. The herd featured a concentration of welcome Flashs Hollirex blood with 13 daughters and 19 granddaughters in the sale.

The sale, under the management of the Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeders' Association and the Merryman Company, also included added consignments from Joseph Thompson, Symna, N.Y, Robert Smith, Annville, Pa., Andrew Strahorn, Newton Square, Pa., Anchor & Hope, Inc., Port Deposit, Md., and Ross McClausland, Glyndon, Md. A total 74 head were sold for an average of $605.41.

Two animals shared the top-selling price with each commanding $1,275. Selling from the Macri herd was Macs Bright Winter, a three year old by Arizona Farms Bright with 10,312 pounds of milk and 519 pounds of fat as a two year old in 305 days. She was purchased by Westbrook Guernsey Farm, Biglerville, Pa.

Tying for $1,275 was Lebanon Valley Noble Mildred consigned by Robert Smith, Annville, Pa and purchased by Kevin Dobbs, Loysville, Pa. Selling open and milking 61.8 pounds of 4.8 percent milk daily, this cow's dam is a VG Mulhocaway Butterfat Halyard daughter and is projected at five years to make 15,579 pounds of milk and 836 pounds of fat in 305 days.

Commanding the second high-selling price of the day was Macs Rexford Jolie, bred and consigned by A.C. Macri, Jr., this Hollirex granddaughter sold to Chester Hawkins, Oxford, Pa. for $1,050. She is due in November to a service by Yellow Creek Doramost and has credits of 10,820 pounds of milk and 558 pounds of fat at two years ten months in 305 days.

High volume buyers for the day with 13 head was Westbrook Guernsey Farm, Biglerville, Pa. and Ed Gross, Bamburg, S.C. who trucked home 10 head. Buyers from six states were listed as purchasers by the sales clerks.

Hoffmans

addition, the herd sports a few Jerseys and grade cows.

While Terry developed a certain fondness for the gentle Guernseys, he admitted that in the beginning his herd was stressed with feet and leg problems, a condition typical of the breed.

He began breeding for type and stronger underpinning as well as production and enlisted the help of such current popular bulls as Choice, Premier and Telestar as well as an older bull, Burgers Place Billy to help turn the herd around.

The herd maintains a rolling herd average of more than 10,000 pounds of milk and 485 of butterfat. Their creamy product is harvested twice a day by Karen and Dawn in a stall barn with bucket milkers and dumping stations.

Billy and Lisa alternate occasionally at milking to spell their mother and sister. When they're not relief milking, Billy doles out the herd's silage and feed daily, and Lisa cares for the heifers and calves. Although his specialty is field work, Terry is the farm's "general manager."

The Hoffman herd is fed corn silage and haylage free choice in the bunk. During late spring, however, the cows receive a a few loads of green chop once a day. The remainder of their forage needs is met by a twice a day feeding of second or third cutting alfalfa.

Their concentrate is a 16 percent protein mix of homegrown shell corn, oats, soybeans, salt, minerals and molasses.

Terry explained that the concentrate is all-natural with nothing artifical added. The Hoffmans gradually have been getting away from chemical use in their operation.

To cut back on chemical herbicides and pesticides, Terry used an organic soil conditioner, last year, on 10 acres of corn and found his yield was 25 percent better than surrounding fields with about the same condition.

He noted that he used the same conditioner this year for all his corn, about 250 acres worth. The remainder of the Hoffman crops include 80 acres in small grains — wheat, oats and barley — 225 acres in hay, 160 acres in alfalfa and 40 acres in pasture.

The rocky soil of Hunterdon County provides an optimum growing situation for Terry's alfalfa. He said a stand will usually be around eight to ten years. In fact, he recently plowed a 13-year-old field to put in late corn.

The milking herd is out on pasture all summer long until they retire to the 48-stall barn or the 70 by 60 foot loafing shed.

Dry cows and heifers make use of pasture, also, and are supplemented with mixed hay and a mix of ground corn, hay, salt and minerals in a self feeder. Baby calves start out with a bellyful of colustrum and stay with whole milk for about six to eight weeks, Karen said. They also have alfalfa hay and feed in front of them from day one.

The "city cousins" who descended on the Hoffman farm, Sunday, met the family, the animals and for a day became a part of a way of life that we salute each June. A way of life, at least in north Hunterdon County, that hopefully will not become a just memory to all who live there

Lancaster no-till planter available

LANCASTER — The Lancaster County Conservation District's no-till corn planter is available to Lancaster County farmers interested in double-cropping corn or soybeans after hay or small grains.

To date, 32 farmers have planted more than 400 acres with the four-row John Deer planter, which was purchased by the District to give farmers the opportunity to try no-till planting and utilize the benefits of soil and water conservation

Lancaster County farmers may use the planter for one day with no limit on acreage at a fee of $4.50 per acre for corn and $6.00 per acre for soybeans

Interested farmers should contact the Lancaster County Conservation District Office at 299-5361 or visit the office in Room 6, Farm and Home Center

Covington updates Equity program

COLUMBUS, O. — The following is a report by Equity specialist Calvin Covington who recently addressed the 24th Annual Meeting of the American Jersey Cattle Club. National All-Jersey, Inc.

"During the past twelve months, 13 plants and co-ops have adopted milk buying plans that include payment for protein. This brings the total to over 60 plants and co-ops that are including protein in their payment plans. Ten of these 13 plants and co-ops implemented End-Product Pricing. This is the pricing plan we consider the best for manufacturing milk and which we hope to get in the Federal Order system. The states of Idaho, Iowa, Utah and Wisconsin have protein markets available to most all Jersey dairymen.

There are several interesting facts to point out concerning the plants that have adopted End-Product Pricing. Many are very large operations. One of the cheese plants is one of the largest in the United States. Ninety-five percent of the producers for these plants are Holstein dairymen. The boards of directors of the co-ops that have adopted End-Product Pricing have been mostly Holstein producers. This should help convince most people that Equity is not a breed issue.

Everyone, by now, knows of the additional money Equity is returning to Jersey producers. It is difficult to estimate the total amount because of the large number. We do know the additional money to Jersey breeders each year is in the millions. In Wisconsin, over $800,000 is being returned yearly to Jersey dairymen. It is encouraging to be able to say to a prospective new Jersey breeder that the price of Jersey milk is 75 cents to $1.00 per hundred-weight more than the price a year ago, while other milk prices are 10 - 25 cents/cwt, or more, lower than a year ago.

The Equity Program continues to do as much as possible to keep its inventors informed about equitable pricing. This year, three regional Equity meetings were held across the country to gain input and new ideas from our investors. Several new Equity handouts were developed and widely distributed. Equity continued to advertise in major breed and trade magazines. The Equity library continued to advertise in major breed and trade magazines. The Equity library continues to be a national source for all kinds of people from dairymen to processors and also university professors to obtain information.

Progress has been made with the major co-ops. One large Ohio based co-op will begin a protein premium program January 1, 1983. Most co-ops are testing their members' milk for protein. Practically all co-ops with significant manufacturing operations are carefully considering End-Product Pricing.

Support of the Equity Program remains good. The number of investors is staying around 800. We are asking those dairymen receiving direct benefits from Equity to invest 6 cents per cwt or the cash equivalent.

Six cents is a small amount to pay considering the return they are getting. There are many dairymen now selling to Equity markets with whom we were not directly involved in establishing their market.

These dairymen think they do not have to invest in program because we did not directly help establish their market. It is true that there are some markets where we were not directly involved in and there will be many more. It is impossible to be involved in all of them. What these people need to understand is that through our early efforts, promotion and starting markets, their own market has come into existence. We are like catalyst in that our work in one area is spreading to other areas.

Looking toward the future there is still much to be done. More cheese plants need to be contacted. More work needs to be done with co-ops. More of the national dairy leaders and organizations need to be encouraged to promote End-Product Pricing. More research is needed in the feeding and breeding for protein.

Looking further into the future, hopefully we will have a simple and inexpensive test for casein. Equity money is now being used to develop one. By using casein instead of protein, it will make the buying plan more equitable and better for Jersey dairymen. We need to start thinking about how to receive additional money for Jersey milk because of its manufacturing efficiency,

The cost per pound when making cheese from Jersey milk, even when paid for the extra yield, is less than average milk. This is due to the fixed costs being the same whether the milk yields 8 lbs. or 12 lbs. of cheese. Equity pricing is the best and easiest way to keep increasing the demand, value and strength of the Jersey organizations."

Too much rain stresses Pa. crops

HARRISBURG — In contrast to early-May when crops were showing signs of stress due to lack of moisture, they are now beginning to show signs of stress due to excessive moisture, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

Statewide, only three days during the week ending June 20 were rated suitable for farm fieldwork due to wet conditions. These activities included spraying, making hay and haylage, mowing pastures, planting soybeans, transplanting tobacco, and harvesting green beans, strawberries, cherries and lettuce. Topsoil moisture was rated surplus by 74 percent of the reporters and adequate by 26 percent.

The Commonwealth's soybean crop is 80 percent planted, slightly behind last year at this time when 82 percent was planted. In the northern region 86 percent is planted, in the central region 70 percent is planted and in the southern region 85 percent is planted.

Corn averaged 12 inches high for the state, one inch shorter than last year at this time. Corn in the northern, central and southern regions averaged 11, 12 and 14 inches respectively.

Statewide, barley is starting to ripen with 58 percent of the crop turning yellow and six percent ripe compared with last year when 48 percent was turning yellow and less than five percent was ripe. In the northern region 55 percent is turning yellow, in the central region 58 percent is turning yellow and eight percent is ripe, while in the southern region 61 percent is turning yellow and nine percent is ripe.

Sixteen percent of the wheat crop in Pennsylvania is turning yellow, slightly behind last year at this time when 20 percent was turning yellow. In the north 23 percent is turning, in the central region five percent is turning and in the southern region 20 percent is turning yellow. Lodging is reported to be a problem in some areas of the state.

The Commonwealth's oat crop is 47 percent headed compared with 53 percent last year. In the northern region 49 percent is headed, in the central region 34 percent is headed and in the southern region 57 percent is headed.

Wet conditions continue to wreak havoc on the state's first crop hay, with alfalfa 40 percent cut compared with 56 percent last year. Statewide, clover timothy stands are 19 percent harvested compared with 37 percent last year. The quality of hay made during the week was rated poor by 54 percent of the reporters, fair by 43 percent and good by three percent. The amount of feed obtained from pastures was rated average by 55 percent of the reporters, above average by 37 percent and below average by eight percent.

equivalent of dairy products purchased by the Commodity Credit Corporation as a necessary reserve for government programs and policies," said Martin.

State Grange Master Charles Wismer testified tht the dairy industry has also been the victim of bad press and continual criticism.

"Adverse publicity linking the dairy products to high cholesterol and subsequently heart problems, while never adequately substantiated, has served to decrease sales of whole milk and whole milk products," Wismer explained.

"The media would have you believe that dairy farming is very profitable because the government spends $2.6 million to buy up dairy surpluses at the rate of $13.10 a hundred. This is not really true.

"In fact, statistics indicate otherwise. While milk production has increased tremendously, entry into the dairy industry has actually dropped over the years," Wismer added. He explained that since 1940, the number of dairy farms in the U.S. dropped from 2,400,000 to 300,000.

"There's no way to get around the fact that we have a very serious problem," Wismer admitted. "Production has rapidly increased to the point that CCC-purchased surpluses are rotting away in warehouses or are being given away to the underprivileged."

Wismer dismissed the idea of lowering support prices to $12 or lower.

"It is not a problem solved by a quick slice of the budget ax, but rather one which must be solved with some careful planning and research," he said.

The Pennsylvania Farmers Union spokesman James Graci indicated that the Reagan Administration's proposal to solve the dairy crisis would result in a "two-fold destruction of the dairy industry."

"To again freeze the support price would only invite dairymen to continue their historic practice: produce more to keep afloat," Graci said.

"But the most serious flaw to the plan are the small family farmers who could not afford to stay solvent regardless of overproduction. Those farmers will be forced out of business," he added.

Graci recommended that Specter consider sponsoring or co-sponsoring a bill introduced by Congressman James Oberstar of Minnesota which would set up a production base for dairymen, as well as guarantee a minimum price support of 75 percent of parity.

"The bottom line is consumer acceptance," Graci noted.

William Matson, representing the Pennsylvania League for Consumer Protection offered the consumer's view.

"As the consuming public, they are concerned about having future, adequate supplies of reasonably-price dairy products available to them," Matson said.

"As taxpayers, they are concerned about paying for costly federal programs which currently cause overproduction," he added.

Matson blasted the Administration's proposal and said it could actually increase government expenditures.

"The government, in many cases, would have to cover defaults on federal loans and loan guarantees made to farmers who would be forced out of agriculture by the Administration's approach," Matson explained. "In addition, these former farm families would probably be added to our unemployment and welfare rolls."

"As Pennsylvanians, we believe in the family farmer. Because our state is not conducive to large-scale corporate farming, Pennsylvania stands to lose much if indigenous agricultural operations are assumed by out-of-state corporate farming interests, interests which shift these operations to other regions of the nation." Matson added.

Ag bills

state-owned farmland may be transferred in the future.

Thornburgh signed an executive order in 1980 transferring farmlands, buildings and inventory at ten state institutions to PDA. Since then, eight of the farms have been leased to family farmers. The two remaining farms at Danville and Norristown are being considered for educational and research uses.

Pennsylvania Farmers' Association President Keith Eckel praised Thornburgh's signing of SB 1283. "Farmland preservation is a priority policy objective of our Association," he said.

As a fitting end to June Dairy Month, Thornburgh's signing of SB 1350 puts more teeth into Pennsylvania's Milk Sanitation Act which dates back to 1935. It now defines how manufactured dairy products must be handled and joins its "sister" law, the Milk Identification Act, which cracks down on imitation dairy products.

Vo-ag

ag cutbacks are being heard across the state. Such cutbacks are due to a variety of taxing or budgetary problems that may exist in the individual areas

For example:

Ephrata School District in Lancaster County, one of the area pioneers in vocational agriculture, has cut two vo-ag positions in the past two years, reducing the department from four to two.

Concern over program trimmings have been expressed at Conrad Weiser High School in Berks County.

Other areas reportedly affected in one way or another include Hollidaysburg, West Snyder and even as far west as Erie County.

"We realize that school boards and administrators are having problems in balancing their budgets," Evans said.

"But this must be done in a balanced way."

Many observers close to the vo-ag scene do not consider it fair if extra funds are set aside by the state for vocational education and then are used for general budgetary purposes and the intended programs, such as vo-ag, are cut back.

"We must not allow quality agricultural instruction to be considered in the same way as general education," Evans said.

"These summer programs are very important and particularly vital in the one-member vo-ag departments.

"After all, you just don't feed or milk a dairy cow nine months out of the year and make her wait for fall for a project to resume."

Also, many cropping projects can be conducted only over the summer, along with students having temporary work assignments with agribusiness

Evans considers the reinforcement, not reduction, of vocational agriculture programs important for three reasons

First, if the state is to have economic recovery, efforts must be directed at industry. Vo-ag works directly with agribusiness and farmers, who are small businessmen. Together, they make up the state's leading industry

Second, many more students studying agriculture at Penn State come from non-farming backgrounds. Vo-ag is the only way in which they can get the necessary preparation to become better college ag students and eventually better workers in agriculture.

Third, quality vocational agricultural instruction in secondary schools is one of the few basic differences which give our country a basic agricultural advancement over developing countries

The Supervised Occupational Experience Program (SOE) is considered so important that vo-ag representatives from throughout the country will gather at the National FFA Headquarters in Alexandria, Va., from July 25-30 to evaluate the program and devise ways to improve it.

The vo-ag teachers will take a field trip to Southeastern Pennsylvania on Wednesday, July 28, to visit FFA students working on their projects in Lancaster, Lebanon and Berks counties. Among participants in the visit will be State Education Secretary Robert Scanlon.

PASTURE NUTRIENT BALANCER
As you know good pasture provides an excellent source of protein during the spring and summer months In fact, lush green pasture may be as rich in protein on a dry basis, as corn gluten feed or brewers' dried grain Occasionally, some persons become so enthusiastic about the nutritive merits of pasture that they conclude it is fully the equivalent of a protein-rich concentrate This is a considerable exaggeration
In two important respects the best of pasture differs decidedly from a high-grade concentrate ration This is in the percentage of fiber (fiber is undigestable and has no feed value) and consequently in the TDN or net energy Lush pasture will usually contain 18 to 20 percent fiber compared to approximately two percent fiber in ground corn (when both are dried to the same dry matter content)[1] Since it is impossible to balance rations for grazing animals, energy, vitamins and minerals should always be made available To insure that the animals nutrient requirements are met during these upcoming months, we recommend that you consider MOPRO 16% Liquid Protein fed free choice
MOPRO 16% Liquid Protein is a High Energy Feed which has been specifically designed to economically carry more cattle per acre while increasing gains on pasture without grain Our stable guaranteed vitamin and mineral package has proven helpful in the prevention of pinkeye, thrush, and ringworm while improving general herd health and conception rates Good pasture along with MOPRO 16% Liquid Protein supplies the most economical feeding program for grazing animals during the growing season

...HARVESTORE® STRUCTURES AND HIGH MOISTURE CORN!

Charles & Anna Grace Moore

"AFTER OUR STRUCTURE PAYMENT IS MADE AND THE COST OF CORN DEDUCTED, WE STILL SAVE OVER $500 A MONTH IN FEED BILLS!"

Charles Moore
Cochranville, PA

"Since purchasing a HARVESTORE Structure for high moisture corn in 1981, our D.H.I.A. average has gone from 17,216 lbs. of milk and 617 lbs. of fat to 19,769 lbs. of milk and 693 lbs. of fat, AN INCREASE OF 2,553 LBS. OF MILK AND 76 LBS. OF FAT," says Charlie.

"All the rumors we heard were that we'd drop in fat if we fed high moisture corn. All the feed salesmen told us that. But our records prove that's wrong — we went up 76 lbs.! One thing that helped us overcome the doubt that high moisture corn wouldn't work as well as our salesman said it would, was that we talked to other farmers who said it does work!" says Anna Grace.

Anna Grace likes the convenience of the HARVESTORE System. "It's much easier than having to help grind feed!" she says.

"After our Structure payment is made and the cost of the corn deducted, we still save over $500 a month in feed bills," says Charlie.

THE MOORES INCREASED 2,553 LBS. MILK AND 76 LBS. BUTTERFAT WITH 'NATURAL' MOISTURE CORN!

Vacations aren't so rare on the Ranck farm

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

A summer vacation for a dairy farmer is often as rare as sunny days were this June. J. Ray and Reba Ranck milk about 45 Holsteins on their Rayba Acres Farm at 183 Black Horse Road in Paradise and since they cannot often go away, they bring tourists to their dairy farm and get to know other parts of the country through them.

Hosting tourists is certainly no vacation, but it is and education. The education is provided by both sides, because the Rancks use this opportunity to get out the farm story. Reba explains, "A lot of people ask questions, and we take that opportunity to tell them about farming That way they learn that food does not grow on supermarket shelves."

In fact, one wall of the very beautifully-decorated upstairs of their home contains promotions sure to catch both eye and the memory of these tourists. Samples include: "Milk drinkers are better lovers;" "Milk-the Udder Cola;" and "If you eat, you're involved in agriculture."

Now in their 12th year of hosting tourists, Reba says, "I don't know exactly why we got into it, but we had three bedrooms we weren't using and decided to try it one year and see if we liked it." The next year they decided to put in an extra bathroom.

The Ranck's farmhouse is uniquely suited for a tourist home. Built in 1863, it has 19 rooms, and two stairways, which allow the tourists to have their own access to the upstairs and their own outside entrance. Reba says, "The house was laid out perfectly."

There are four bedrooms given over to the tourists plus two rooms they built over a recently constructed three car garage. The Ranck's daughter, Rhonda, 14, has gained an attic room, after years of giving over her bedroom to tourists in the summer. The two new rooms have their own bathroom, and the four rooms in the main house share a bath. One of the new rooms was designed for use as a recreation room for the Ranck children, but it offers a perfect setting for additional tourists

The Ranck's can now host up to 22 people, using roll-aways, but they average around 15-20 people.

Most of the work of having tourists falls to Reba who schedules and cleans and often acts as unofficial tour guide, offering advice on things to do and places to see. Although there is complimentary coffee in an automatic pot in the upstairs hall, Reba says she has no desire to cook for her visitors. "Feeding my own family is enough," she says with a laugh.

Tourists take priority in the work schedule for Reba, who devotes every summer morning to doing laundry, cleaning rooms and preparing for new arrivals. She launders towels every day, and there are frequent changes of sheets as well. She dusts daily, cleans the bathrooms daily and vacuums between visitors and as needed during their stay. She says, "Sometimes when the kids are in the hay now there is hay and straw everywhere, especially where they take their clothes off." Reba also makes beds for her guests if they don't do it themselves before they leave for the day.

Reba says, "You work yourself into a routine. I've learned to make things as convenient as possible. I keep supplies handy, and I bring a big wastecan into the room rather than taking the smaller ones out. A routine has a lot to do with how easy it is. It's important to do it in order, and to take one last look before you leave the room."

There is a good side to all this work, Reba points out. "How else can you clean your own house and get paid for it?"

A real benefit to Reba as she works around the large farmhouse cleaning and making beds each morning is the portable telephone which her husband gave her as a gift. She uses it as a regular phone, and can make reservations for potential guests or let her notary customers know she is at home. She feels it is important because it prevents her from missing calls. "I carry it everywhere," she says.

There are some very positive benefits for the Ranck children. In addition to Rhonda there is Rob, 17, and Ryan, 9. "The biggest thrill is seeing the kids enjoy them. Having tourists has helped the kids appreciate what we have. It has made us all appreciate what we've got and what we take for granted It makes the kids more satisfied, and makes them feel good. It makes us realize all the more our farm and our heritage," Reba explains.

The children become very involved with the tourists and help them by taking them through the barns or getting a game of baseball started. It helps their self-esteem when city kids exclaim about their expertise of farm equipment. Rhonda lightens the load by helping with cleaning chores.

Ray also gets into the act, and invites the tourists to watch the milking. He even allows them to try their hand at milking. "He enjoys it," Reba says She points out that the few cows he allows tourists to milk are "so used to it" that they don't even flinch at the strange fingers milking them. Indeed, none of the cows bother to glance at the tourists when they stroll through the barns. The guests, of course, are thrilled with the first-hand experience.

Reba says many tourists say "We are going home to our farm," after a day of touring in the country.

Many of the Ranck's guests come from the city, and Reba says they think they are really going far into the country by the time they get to their farm. "It is so unusual to them. They can't imagine being in a place so free and open. Many people say to me, 'I admire your lifestyle. We see a lot of good in it.'"

There are an occasional few who simply cannot make the adjustment to the quiet of the countryside. One couple left after just one night and Reba learned later that it was because it was "too dark." This brought a chuckle to Reba who pointed out all the neighbors who have mercury vapor lights, including one on their own barn.

The Rancks are equipped to host some winter visitors since all the rooms are equipped with electric heating units (and air conditioning for the summer). Reba said, "Almost every weekend all winter we had someone. The weather has a lot to do with it."

She added, "The rain has really put a damper on the business. The first two weeks of June are down I don't think the economy has hurt us because people are taking shorter vacations and we are within a tankful of gas for many areas."

She said a low point in their 12 years of hosting came in the season that followed the local polio scare, TMI and the gas shortage. "As long as gas is available they come More are coming and staying three or four days instead of just one or two days." Despite the slow June, Reba says, "We are still ahead of last year."

They had 1350 guests last year

(Turn to Page B4)

Keeping the farmstead neat is an important part of Reba's work. She sweeps outside as faithfully as she cleans the guests rooms. Here she works to keep the guests' entrance beautiful.

Rayba Acres is the destination of many tourists who wish to visit in Lancaster County. They enjoy the country setting and approximately half the visitors return, sometimes more than once a year for a short visit to rest and relax.

This pump brings many questions from tourists who stay in the Ranck home. It is powered by a water wheel in the nearby creek, and offers visitors a refreshing drink of well water. Many declare that it is the best water they have tasted.

Reba Ranck pauses by the bunk beds her husband built into a closet space in one of the bedrooms of their farm home. The "around the world" quilts which grace the bunks and the double bed in the room were made by Reba in the winter.

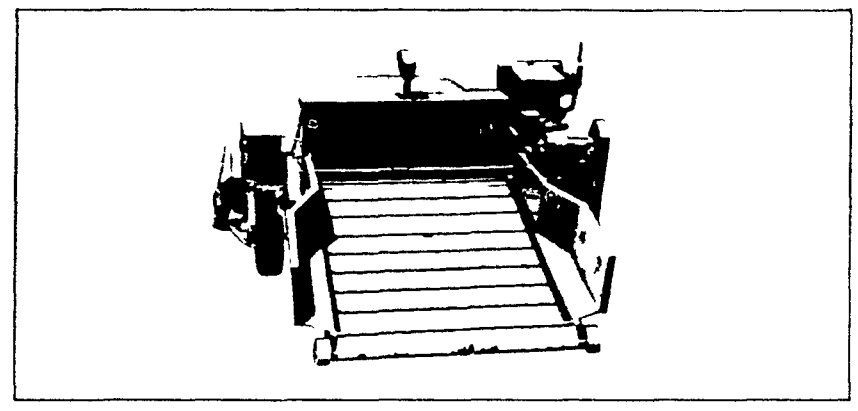
MORE FOR LESS.

The Storage System for the future. Here Now!

THE AG-BAG SYSTEM



MORE FEED. MORE STORAGE. MORE HIGH QUALITY TDN & PROTEIN.

Select from three models of AG-BAG Machines. Motorized, Hydraulic, and Gear-Driven. AG-BAG lets you match the machine to your job. Big or small Whether you're DAIRY or BEEF AG-BAG will store More For Less. The AG-BAG System. Air-tight storage with more versatility than any other system. Just look at these AG-BAG ADVANTAGES:

1. UNLIMITED oxygen-limiting storage
2. Storage for ALL forages & grain
3. Transportable
4. Easy to use and little maintenance
5. NO dangerous silo gases
6. Silo fires WON'T occur
7. Higher moisture forage
8. NO unloader to break down
9. Extra income and potential from custom bagging
10. THE Forage System for the 80's

JUST LISTEN TO WHAT THESE AG-BAG BELIEVERS HAVE TO SAY:

Kenneth Popham of Floresville, Texas

Kenneth runs a 465 cow Dairy and said this about AG-BAG "At today's interest rates you can't afford any other type of storage Even with the yearly cost of bags it's still inexpensive storage a whole lot cheaper than building barns and hiring help I put up 13 bags last year and after seeing the results, I'll put up 25 bags this year The bags are a good thing"

Don Carter of Parkdale, Oregon

"The best move I ever made" says Don Carter in reference to his switch to bagging silage on his dairy near Parkdale Oregon

"I get 18% more feed from the same acreage and the feed lasts three times as long I used to clean my bunks after three days, now I only need to clean them after 10 days"

Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska

'In addition to everything else, it s a management tool says rancher, Roland Rasmussen of Blair Nebraska

Roland farms 350 acres west of Blair Nebraska and fattens about 650 cattle from 600 lbs to finish

"By labeling every bag as to date and kind of feed I can mix my feeds and eliminate the guess work in making a ration I feed alfalfa silage, corn silage and ground ear corn stored exclusively in the bags purchasing only my minerals and vitamin supplements

The AG-BAG system has enabled me to increase carrying capacity per acre at a reduced cost of gain '

Bert Anderson of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"At least 30% more feed I can guarantee at least that says rancher Bert Anderson of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"I've been able to cut my grain feeding costs in half since converting to the bagging It s just like feeding grass I've also eliminated the need for a liquid supplement that we always fed before going to the AG-BAG System '

HERE'S WHAT THE AG-BAG SYSTEM CAN DO FOR YOU
1 BAG	150 TONS
6 BAGS	900 TONS
12 BAGS	1 800 TONS
24 BAGS	3 600 TONS

Reba laughs, "That's a lot of sheets and towels."

Fifty to sixty percent of their guests are repeats, according to Reba, and many people come just as a "getaway." She said the more times they come the less they sightsee. She said they get many older couples and many people who used to vacation on their grandparents' or uncle's farms. "Now they bring their kids back," Reba explains, so they can experience farm life.

She frequently has international visitors, many coming from embassies in Washington, D. C. She keeps very close records of her visitors, including a notation on how they found out about their farm. They are listed with the local tourist bureau, and occasionally advertise, but Reba says, "It doesn't really pay to advertise."

In addition to hosting tourists, Reba has other jobs unrelated to being a farm wife or running a lodging operation. She does regular bookkeeping for Sauder Auto Company, and with thechnological advances, now has a computer terminal in her home to keep up with the work. All of it is done in the first 10 days of the month, but it amounts to 25 hours monthly.

Reba's third home business is being a notary public, something she has done since 1966. You nave to be bonded, and have to be recommissioned by the state every four years to do the work. She calls it "a nice little business," and said she averages about four or five callers daily, with the most frequent request for title transfers. She does not keep regular business hours, but in the summer is rarely away

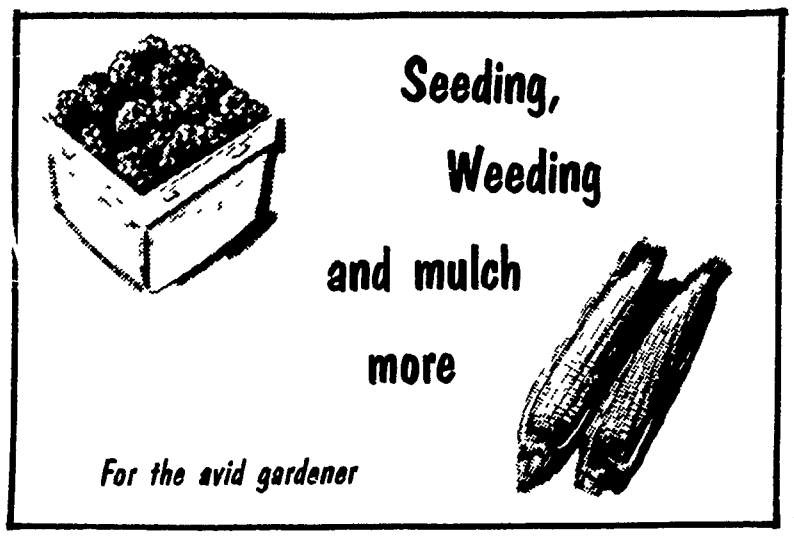
Because they are members of the Ridgeway Mennonite Church in Intercourse, Reba said they often invite guests to go with them "Quite a few go to church with us. Hopefully a Christian witness goes out"

Reba does not work at the barn, and, in fact, has become allergic to being with the cows, but she often helps with haying and does the preserving from a large garden that is a family project. When there is time, she says, "I like to sit and read."

Something she finds time for in winter is quilting, and she has used four of her quilts as bedspreads in her guest rooms. One of the quilts was designed for her own bedroom in the log cabin pattern but is temporarily gracing a guest bedroom. In another bedroom there is a double bed quilt and two singles on bunk beds, all done in blue in the "around the world" pattern.

Reba says she has learned one thing over the years, "I have to be calm. But there comes a time when I do get tired of being nice."

When that time comes almost no one is aware of it because of her truly pleasant personality, one that is perfectly suited to making visitors feel welcome and at home in a lovely, tranquil rural setting. For those who choose Rayba Acres, it is a gracious introduction to the best of farm life.



Double Cropping

You can practice "double cropping" in your home vegetable garden as well as or better than the farmer can with his field crop. In fact, to realize the maximum value from your garden plot, "double cropping" is essential.

By "double cropping" we mean planting and harvesting two crops from the same ground in a single growing season.

For example, spinach is an eary crop. It requires sowing as early in the spring as possible, so it matures before hot weather sets in. This will leave space for another planting such as green beans that mature later in the summer. Another crop that bears early and is finished by early summer is peas. That same space can then be dug over and replanted with broccoli, cauliflower or brussel sprouts to mature during fall of the same year.

Corn reaches a peak in midsummer, and the space it occupies can be replanted with a fall crop of cabbage, lettuce, or broccoli. Lettuce, beets, carrots, spinach, turnips, bush beans, broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage and radishes are all vegetables that can be double cropped by a planting in spring followed by another in midsummer for fall harvesting.

Certain vegetable varieties do better as a fall crop than a spring or summer crop. These include broccoli, cauliflower and brussel sprouts. These are better planted in mid-summer so they mature during the cool weater or fall.

Brussel sprouts planted this w are especially valuable, since the green sprouts can be picked into December when store prices for green vegetables are usually high

Some vegetables take a long growing season to mature properly. These include leaks, pumpkins, winter squash, and parsnips. Hence, "double cropping" of these is not possible.

It's strawberry season!

LANCASTER — Strawberries are here! The season is limited so you will want to serve them often

Choose berries that are plump and well rounded, with a natural shine, rich, red color, and bright green, fresh looking caps Usually medium to small strawberries have better eating quality than larger ones Select mature strawberries as they will not ripen after being picked.

Avoid berries with large uncolored areas or with large seedy areas. There will be poor in flavor and texture. A dull shrunken appearance or softness is a sign of overripeness or decay Use strawberries as soon after purchase as possible to insure the best flavor and appearance and highest nutritional value Never wash strawberries until just before using Washing removes the natural protective outer layer

To store, remove berries from their containers and arrange them in a single layer on a cookie sheet or other shallow container In this manner, air can circulate and the weight of the berries on top won't crush those on the bottom Before storing fruits, sort them and either use or discard damaged fruits immediately Cool refrigerator temperatures will help keep the berries fresh and bright for several days The length of time that a fresh fruit will retain high quality under home storage conditions varies with the condition of the fruit when purchased or harvested Strawberries are delicate and require the gentlest of handling

To wash, place berries in a clean pan filled with cool water Gently lift the berries into a colendar to drain If berries are quite sandy, again fill pan with cool water and repeat procedure Never remove caps before washing strawberries Caps prevent water from soaking into the strawberries diluting the flavor,changing the texture, and minimizing nutritional value

After washing, remove caps trying not to remove any of the berry itself Give the cap a gentle twist or use the point of a sharp paring knife Now you are ready to serve your strawberries whole, sliced or in any recipe Strawberrries are an excellent source of Vitamin C and 1 cup of berries has only about 60 calories

1/2 gall. vanilla ice cream
4 c. milk

Mix milk and instant pudding. Then add soft ice cream and mix. Pour in dish lined with graham cracker crust Chill.

Rachel Martin, Lititz

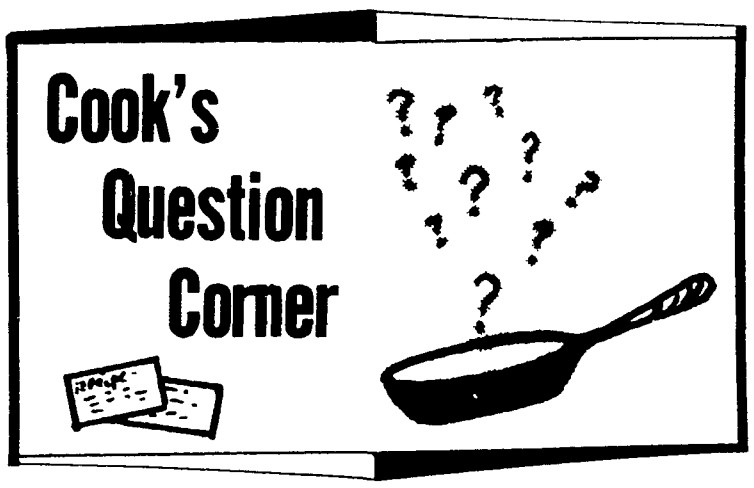
STRAWBERRY SWEET DREAM

2 c. milk
1/2 c rice
1/2 c sugar
1 t. vanilla
2 c strawberries, sweetened whipped cream

Cook the rice and milk over low heat until most of the milk is absorbed but mixture is still creamy. Stir occasionally Cover and allow to cool 15 minutes. Stir in sugar and vanilla. Press into a fancy mold. Unmold just before serving by dipping mold into hot water Top with strawberries and whipped cream

L. Leid, New Holland

Dairy products add such a versatile, tasty flavor to the menu that it is no wonder it has become one of the favorite food groups among young and old alike. Children seem to delight most in ice cream, while adults like luscious cheesecake. But everybody seems to enjoy cheese - plain cheese, cheese on crackers, and cheese by the mouthful.



QUESTION - This isn't a cooking question, but hope you can help I have so much problem getting the glue from labels off of plastic containers Whenever I use any cleansers or solvents the finish is destroyed Can your readers suggest a solution that will not ruin the plastic finish?

K. Ashton

ANSWER - It has been suggested that you try fingernail polish remover This has taken off many a sticky label in its time and leaves virtually no side effects We suggest you try a small bit on the bottom of your container first so that if it is going to do damage, you will know before hand not to use it Good luck!

ANSWER - To Terry Conley who requested a recipe for baked beans using canned beans comes this answer.

Potato is hot the world over

WASHINGTON, D C — Mashed into a side dish or fried into fast food, the potato is easy to underestimate

But potatoes are actually the world's bread and butter, according to the International Potato Center in Lima, Peru Potatoes yield more nutritious food more quickly on less land and in harsher climates than any other major food crop

This amazing vegetable is a South American native brought back to Europe from Peru by 16th-century conquistadors. Its own world conquest now complete, King Potato grows in more countries than any crop except corn

Robert E Rhoades of the International Potato Center writes in the May issue of National Geographic· "The average annual crop (291 million tons) could cover a four-lane superhighway circling the world six times "

Produced in 130 of the world's 167 independent countries, one year's crop is worth $106 billion at consumer prices, Rhoades reports

Potatoes are fourth, after wheat, corn, and rice, in world production, but because of multiple harvests, yield the most protein and food energy per acre.

They are remarkably adaptable; potatoes grow from below sea level behind Dutch dikes to almost 14,000 feet up in the chilly Andes and Himalayas, from the Artic Circle to the Straight of Magellan, and in the scorching deserts of Australia and Africa.

Rhoades notes that tomatoes, tobacco, and eggplants are related to the potato, but the sweet potato is not — even though its Indian name, batata, became the English word potato.

The familiar brown oval spud belongs to the species Solanum tuberosum, one of eight cultivated throughout the world. Most of the world's crop and all potatoes grown in the United States belong to this species.

In the Andes, however, farmers cultivate all eight species, embracing as many as 3,000 of 5,000 or

Food & Fun

An Irish lad carries recently harvested potatoes home for his family's dinner. Valued worldwide for nutrition and versatility, spuds grow in more countries than any crop except corn. Although potatoes are native to South America, the Irish and East Europeans lead the world in per capita consumption.

Looking for something to do? Bake cookies!

Kids, do you often find yourself asking mom, "What can I do?"

When swimming, baseball, television and pets begin to become a bore, why not try your hand in the kitchen? Summer vacation is the perfect time to learn to cook

Not only will you be teaching yourself a new hobby and having some fun, but you can treat your family and help mom - to which you're sure to get a reward whether it be a new toy or a big hug

Below are two delicious recips so easy and fun to make Crispy Cookies takes no baking, but you may want mom to help you the first time you boil the syrup and sugar.

The second recipe, Brownie Thumbprint Cookies, allows you to leave your personal mark on each cookie But be sure your hands are clean first!

BROWNIE THUMBPRINT COOKIES

1 pkg. brownie mix
1/2 c. finely chopped pecans
1 c. powdered sugar
2 T. soft butter
1 T. cream
1/4 t. vanilla

Make up brownie mix. Drop batter by teaspoonfuls into the chopped nuts. Roll into balls, Place 1-inch apart on lightly greased baking sheet. Bake in 350 degree oven for 12 minutes. Remove from oven; quickly press thumb gently into top of each cookie. Cool. Blend the powdered sugar, butter together. Stir in cream and vanilla until smooth. Drop a spoonful of mixture into the thumbprint of each brownie.

CRISPY COOKIES

1 c. light corn syrup
1 c. sugar
1½ c. smooth peanut butter
4 c. crisp rice cereal

Lansdale Club offers horse project

NORRISTOWN — Horses will be the focus of a 4-H project being offered at the Lansdale 4-H summer club. The summer club will be held on six consecutive Thursday mornings, 9:30 - 11:30, July 8 through August 12 at the 4-H Center on Snyder Road in Lansdale.

The Horse Science project is designed for youth 8 - 13 with an interest in horses. Participants don't need to own a horse in order to join the fun. Members will learn about horse care, grooming, feeding and riding styles There will be talks, demonstrations and some hands-on experiences.

For more information and registration for the horse science project or any other projects being offered, please call Yvette Amar, Sheila Kielstock or Janet Weymouth, summer program assistants at the Montgomery County 4-H Office at 277-0574. The enrollment fee for any of these projects is $3 to cover the cost of materials. Advance registration is recommended as enrollment is limited.

Hunterdon Co. schedules 4-H camp

FLEMINGTON, N.J — July 7 is the final registration date for the 1982 Hunterdon County 4-H camp.

The entire $56 registration is due at this time so that all applications can be processed by July 19, the first day of camp. Registration is open to both 4-H'ers and non-4-H members

Scheduled for the one-week session are swimming, softball, kickball, volleyball, shuffleboard, ping pong, aerobics, crafts, outdoor cookery, fishing, horseback riding, nature study, carnival night, camp Olympics, water carnival, talent show, counselor hunt costume party, campfire, and the final awards ceremony.

For more information, contact the county 4-H office at 788-1340 or 1341.

more potato varieties. Rhoades describes the varieties: "The colors of the rainbow and more, many looked like miniature pineapples, some like coral snakes, and others like bright red cherries or purple gumdrops."

When Europe's potato crops fell victim to late blight in the mid-19th century, a million people died in Ireland, where potatoes were the chief food. Now scientists believe that genetic engineering of potatoes holds promise for a 21st-century solution to the world food crisis.

The International Potato Center's goal is to make the potato available and inexpensive to everyone by the year 2000.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

As the afternoon wore on, the air grew heavier and the sun nudged the barn thermometer past the hundred-degree mark. A suppertime darkening of the skies and sprinkling of raindrops had cooled the atmosphere only slightly.

On the way to feed calves, I'd remembered my promise to tend Patty's two loveable pet guinea pigs while she was enjoying 4-H camp. Snoopy and Mopsy's favorite place is out on the lawn, so I put them inside the low wire enclosure she moves around from place to place, and set their little cardboard box for shade in with them.

By the time the calves had been fed, milking finished, and father and son on their way to auction, the evening sky hung ominous with gray clouds and thunder grumbled in the west.

Fritz, terrified of thunderstorms, bumped against the screen door, and knowing his fear, I let him in to hide in the basement, trailing his hot weather, doggy odor behind him Jagged flashes of lightning repeatedly lit the distant sky and raindrops began pattering the maples around the house

With gathering ferocity, the storm brought rain, wind and lightning, but seemed to be slightly detouring around the farm That was welcome, since I've seen the fury they've delivered in the form of burnt out milk tank compressors, blown transformers and exploded phone boxes Being home alone through a violent electrical storm is not my first choice of ways to spend a summer evening

Just as I breathed a sigh of relief that the worst seemed past, a gust of wind burst through the windows on the south blowing over a cup of plants to be rooted, and spewing water across the floor. With double velocity, the storm had spun around and was returing.

Rain poured in sheets, trees bent low in the violent wind, and lightning hit nearby, sizzling and crackling in the basement switch box.

A clattering on the porch turned into a brief drumbeat, as hailstones thudded down, striking the house, and I knew, the full, fat heads of the nearly-ripe barley crop

But it was the high-pitched squeal that sent my heart to the pit of my stomach

The guinea pigs! In the rush of finishing at the barn, I'd left them in the yard in their metal fence enclosure

And when another noise sounded above the wind and rain, I recognized the familiar crashes as limbs tearing from the writhing maples, and plummeting to the yard.

Peering through the deluge, I saw that the largest limb had laned squarely on top of the enclosure for the two tiny pets.

"Oh please God, watch over Snoopy and Mopsy " Another boom, and the lights dipped, the switches sizzled again, and the house went momentarily black Fritz cowered at my heels, terrorized by the bedlam

Almost as quickly as it had returned, the storm thundered off eastward Through the slight rain and run off streams that tumbled around the house, I ran to the guinea pigs, fearing the worst

But miraculously, they'd huddled together inside the little box, and other than being slightly damp, seemed none the worse for the adventure

Tucking them into their straw-lined larger wooden pen, I breathed a prayer of thanks and fed the two little fellows the biggest carrots I could find

But I fear it's a permanent black mark on my pet-sitting reputation

Solar fencers shine as isolated pasture chargers

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

GETTYSBURG — Do you have animals on pastureland that is isolated from buildings, or on rented property that is out of your daily view? Are you tired of the expense, time, and labor of checking and changing power cells in battery-powered fencers? Are you trying to save on your electric bills? If so, perhaps you should follow Adams County cattleman John Bigham's lead and install a solar-powered fencer to solve these problems.

John, his father James W., and his brother James R., from 450 acres just down the road from the Eisenhower Farm near Gettysburg. They have a variety of livestock which includes a 120-head, cow-calf operation With the labor involved in farming and their proximity to the tourist trade from Gettysburg, the Bighams find that reliable fencing is a must for their operation

John Bigham saw a solar fencer last winter at his local Agway dealership and decided to give one a try on his hillside pastures. John is using the fencer, which installs like any other fencer, to run a double strand of wire 1/8-mile. The unit can run up to 25 miles of fence compared to other units which usually run up to 10 miles of fence, he said.

The 6 volt unit, which carries an Underwriter's Laboratory approved label, can run up to 21 days without sunlight on stored solar power. It features a normal or miser power control and has a normal or dry weather condition grounding option. The battery is sealed inside the unit and comes in a dated package. If the package date is over two months old, the unit should be left in the sun or exposed to house lights for three to five days for battery recharge.

Bigham projects that with proper care of the unit, which cost him $139.95, he expects it to run five years. He says he plans to take the unit indoors this winter.

Bigham says the initial cost of his fencer, is a bargain compared to the $120 it cost to replace batteries annually in cell-powered fencers.

"I can't see a more economical way to put up a fence," Bigham exclaims. "This unit didn't cost me as much as one roll of woven wire fence and I can rest assured that as long as the sun shines sometime, my fencer is working. With battery powered fencers you can't always be sure."

With his solar unit, Bigham constructed the fence using ¼-mile of wire, post and insulators that he had on the farm. He inserted springs periodically to give the fence some stretch in case deer run into it. Altogether it took him 7 hours to put the fence up for a total investment of $172.

John Bigham, Gettysburg, inspects his solar-powered fencer. Bigham says the unit saves him labor and material costs in fencing his cows and calves.

The cattle confined by the solar powered fencer are about four-tenths of a mile from Bigham's main buildings. "If I were to run a wire from the barns out to here, it wouldn't have enough power in it to be effective I'd have to keep the weeds off of it too. With the solar unit, I can put it where I want it and it gets the job done. You just can't get any more effective fencing than this for the money," claims Bigham.

The Bighams are planning to put a solar fencer on another farm where they currently have electric fencers. John estimates they will save $20 on their electric bills by replacing these fencers with solar units

John says he hopes solar waterers will be next so that watering distant pastures becomes more economical.

Fred Kelly, department manager for Agway's Gettysburg store reports the solar unit's current selling price is $159.95 each. Kelly admits sales have been slow so far, but feels confident that, as fencers are replaced, farmers will consider the solar units.

"These units may be more expensive to start with, but they should be maintenance free. Their best feature is that they can be used on isolated pasture," Kelly says

Farm Supply Supervisor Johnny Robertson of Southern States Inc., Taneytown, Maryland, has his doubts about the popularity of the units. Southern States carries a similar model which sells for $166.70.

Robertson points out that in thirty-three stores last year, only four solar units were sold compared to 275 regular fencers. Stated Robertson, "Solar fencers have an advantage in that you don't have to change the batteries. But, if you have the use of buildings, I don't think farmers will pay the difference in price for the units " Robertson quotes the average cost for a conventional fencer at $55-$65.

FREEZER BOOK AVAILABLE

HOW TO FREEZE FOOD THE RIGHT WAY is a new publication from your Penn State Cooperative Extension Service and it is ready for distribution for only $1.50.

Extension Nutrition Specialists have put together all the latest information on freezing foods to preserve them for later use. Freezing is an excellent choice of food preservation in terms of convenience, nutrition, and stability of food. But to get the most from your frozen food, you must prepare it properly.

This guide covers the basics of freezer management, from selecting the correct-size freezer for your family, to temperature control and the amount of food to freeze at one time.

How to prepare foods for freezing, how to package them and how to load your freezer for maximum convenience and freezer efficiency are all covered in detail. In addition, this guide has vital information on dealing with freezer problems such as defrosting and unexpected thawing.

The second half of HOW TO FREEZE FOOD THE RIGHT WAY is an easy-to-use freezing guide covering all the types of foods you will want to freeze.

To order your copy, contact your county Cooperative Extension Service Office and ask for the new HOW TO FREEZE FOOD THE RIGHT WAY. It may be the best $1.50 you will ever spend for food preservation.

PROTECT APPLESAUCE FROM MOLD

Do you ever have spotty mold develop in your home-canned applesauce? Some home canners have reported problems with mold even after they have followed all the proper procedures. If you have this problem, don't give up home canning. The problem may be in the apples you use, not in your canning abilities.

Unsprayed, organically grown, or windfall apples may be the culprits. Any of these can have invisible colonies of mold that surface after processing and can create moldy applesauce.

But do not despair, you can prevent mold problems if you follow the following advice

— Peel the apples after you have washed them because water alone will not remove mold spores.

— Use the hot pack method and increase the time you heat-process your applesauce by 5 minutes. This means a total of 15 minutes in the boiling water bath canner for pints and 20 minutes for quarts.

— If you are cooking unpeeled apples, process both pints and quarts for 20 minutes to make certain you have destroyed the mold spores.

— Once you have finished and are ready to store your jars, check you storage area first – it should be clean, dark, cool, and dry. Light can make some fruits darken and dampness and create problems with pitting and rust on the lids

Homemade applesauce is a great treat to have all year long. Spending a few extra minutes to keep it fresh will be well rewarded by the smiles and appetites of your family and friends.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It is so easy to feel depressed when a lot of things go wrong in a short period of time Some of our corn was not planted until late in June due to the wet weather and the fact that Allen, my husband, is farming alone, although our son, who just got his agricultural engineering degree from Penn State, has consented to come home from State College each week and help on the farm

It certainly is good that the farmer is an eternal optimist and not a pessimist like me He says that the corn will mature fine for the silo by fall When they put the first cutting of hay in the silo this spring, it was necessary to buy another blower as too many parts broke Then the manure spreader decided to spring a major leak among other problems and wasn't usable

After carefully tending a cow, for over a week that calved in the meadow we had to get rid of her as she still wasn't able to stand Also a wagon was driven from the silo without unhooking the power take-off and everything got bent And when the checkbook ran out of money before all the bills were paid, I was about in tears

Plus whenever I go out our lane, I see bigger and bigger patches of thistles in the new alfalfa stand and large water hemlock plants in the pasture field It seems as though things are getting out of hand.

But finally the sun shines, some hemlock plants are pulled and a cow has a nice heifer calf and then it appears as though there is a bright side to farming after all

1982-83 Lancaster Co. Dairy Princess

LuAnn Brenneman joins Red Rose royalty

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — LuAnn Brenneman became the county's newest member of a "special" royal family last Saturday night when Deb Greider placed a jeweled crown on LuAnn's head designating her Lancaster County Dairy Princess.

Receiving the title of First Alternate was Gail Ginder, the 16-year-old, blonde-haired daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ginder of R3 Elizabethtown.

LuAnn, the 21-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Brenneman of Mount Joy, described herself as "excited" and "really anxious" about her upcoming year.

This young 5'3" brunette with dark brown eyes and red cheeks that mirrored the roses she carried, looked every bit the perfect advertisement for the desirable benefits milk can provide — healthy skin and beautiful teeth, posture and complexion.

At 21, this new princess is just a bit older than the average princess, but said her mother and also the judges, this is just one of the positive traits about LuAnn.

"She can handle any situation. . she's really good with people," her mother stated following the crowning.

And LuAnn agreed. "I was in the pageant once before and this time, up on the stage, I could see the biggest difference in myself. I felt so different."

But to this "different" personality, LuAnn has many months of unique experience to add. Following two years at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan — where she majored in political science hoping someday to be a lawyer — she joined Youth Evangelism Service through her church, the Mount Joy Mennonite Church, and journeyed to Belize in South America doing mission work.

She also found herself in Oregon for six months as a member of a Youth With A Mission team, which LuAnn describes as "a deciple trainingship school."

Jennifer Behney captures Adams dairy crown

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

BIGLERVILLE — Jennifer Behney, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Behney, R2 York Springs, was crowned the 1982-83 Adams County Dairy Princess last Saturday evening during the county's 15th annual pageant at the Biglerville High School auditorium.

Other contestants were Alternate Dairy Princess Kathy Holtzinger, East Berlin, Mary Goulden, Gettysburg, and Peggy Murren, Hanover.

Jennifer will be a junior this fall at Slippery Rock State College where she is majoring in health and physical education. She served as the county's Alternate Dairy Princess last year.

Jennifer's parents operate a 60-cow Holstein farm where she helps with the milking, field work, and is a "go fer," running errands for her father.

At college she serves as an assistant diving coach, is a member of the Health and Physical Education Club, plays coed softball, and is involved in the athletic training program. This summer she is teaching gymnastics part time in the Carlisle area.

During the question-answer portion of the program, Jennifer was asked how she would pursuade someone to purchase butter rather than a substitute. She replied that she would explain to them the nutritional value of butter and that it is a better buy for the consumer's dollar.

Alternate Dairy Princess Kathy Holtzinger is the 18-year-old daughter of Roy and Olive Holtzinger, R2 East Berlin. She is a graduate of Bermudian Springs High School and plans to attend Hagerstown Business College in the fall where she will pursue a major on court and convention reporting.

Kathy served as president of the high school chapter of Future Business Leaders of America, played field hockey, and was copy editor of the yearbook. Musically inclined, Kathy participated in both marching and concert bands in high school and plans to join the Hagerstown Community Band while in college.

Rachel Sherman wears Washington Co. crown

WASHINGTON — As of June 12, Rachel Sherman's life for the next year will be unlike any she has ever experienced — Rachel was named the 1982-83 Washington County Dairy Princess at services at the Washington County Fairgrounds.

Rachel, 17, is from the Samuel and Bev Minor family and is currently attending Penn State University.

This new princess has been active in 4-H, county council, dairy science, and has participated on the state judging team. She owns Holsteins, Jerseys, and Guernseys on the family farm where they milk about 60 cows.

Alternate for the new year is Anna Barchiesi of Waynesburg. Anna is the 16-year-old daughter of Santino and Emma Barchiesi. This year she will be a senior at Jefferson and Morgan High School. She owns Holstein cattle on the 80-head farm.

The princess pageant was part of a three-day mall promotion, running from June 10 through 12, which included 4-H exhibits, PFA women's organization exhibits, the country store from the Pa Department of Agriculture, milk chugging and ice cream eating contests and finally, a strawberry festival at the fairgrounds.

Judges for the pageant were. Sandra Hart Pettit of Washington; Robert Rugaber of Butler County Extension; and Janet Frost Harding of Maplevale Farm in Brookville. —DK

Brenneman joins royalty

Next was a stay in Jackson, Mississippi where she worked in a Christian clothing store as a volunteer with the YWAM team.

For the immediate future, LuAnn plans to stay at home for a while and work on the farm helping to milk their 70 Holsteins and taking care of their 134 acres. She is also working part time as a secretary/bookkeeper and hopes "to pay some bills" for a while

She said she also wants to spend time at home to be with her family which includes her sister JoAnn who also received a title Saturday night — that of Second Alternate Princess for Lancaster County.

Was it awkward for the two sisters to enter the same contest?

"No," asserted LuAnn. "Our parents were in charge of coordinating the pageant this year and when it got close to the closing date, they didn't have many girls. So JoAnn and I got together and decided if one of us would run, the other would too. Then after a while, the idea became more appealing to both of us and neither wanted to quit.

"I now look at the title as a new opportunity for me to spread my knowledge on nutrition and all the heathful ways milk can help you," LuAnn commented.

She has in fact, decided to go back to college next year after her reign and major in nutrition

"I would always read nutrition magazines and books when I was at college and only pre-law books when I had to. I have a lot of ideas on how I can use nutrition in my future, including a three-fold ministry. This would involve helping people stay physically fit, nutritionally fit and spiritually fit," she said.

The sisters once again mirror each other in that they are both interested in nutrition, but with a small twist. JoAnn wants to attend Johnson and Wales College in Rhode Island this fall and major in culinary arts.

LuAnn, in addition to her judge-given title, also bears a coveted title that only her contestant friends can bestow — that of Miss Congeniality

Serving as judges for the Saturday evening pageant were Cindy Shaeffer, dairy farmer, former SUN area princess and second runner-up state princess, and teacher of vo-ag; John Kimbark, managing editor of Pennsylvania Farmer magazine; and Chris Wolf, Columbia County dairy farmer and Master Farmer for 1978.

Deb Greider, past county dairy princess and state alternate princess, was on hand to crown the new princess, drink a milk toast, and say a tearful goodbye.

Master of Ceremonies was Grover Gouker Jr. from the Dale Carnegie Institute, and entertainment was provided by the Singing Millers.

Marilyn Stoltzfus dons Chester dairy crown

WEST CHESTER — Marilyn Stoltzfus of Atglen has been chosen Chester County's new dairy princess at ceremonies held during a dairy festival day, here, May 29.

Marilyn is the daughter of Mast and Anna Stoltzfus and is a senior at Lancaster Mennonite High School.

Amy Elliott of Pottstown was named Alternate Princess. She is the daughter of Ronald Elliott and is attending Owen J. Roberts High School.

The new princess says that after graduation from high school, she hopes to stay on the family farm and help milk the 50 cows. Someday she says she wants to marry a farmer and help him farm.

Her activities include field hockey, softball, youth group and FFA. She also enjoys cooking, sewing, and photography.

When asked how she intends to follow in past princess and current State Dairy Princess Charlene Rohrer's shoes, Marilyn answered, "I will try to do as good a job even though I realize that will be very hard to do. But I will try to meet the challenge and do my very best. I would like to be like Charlene, being able to meet people with a smile and to make them feel welcomed."

Though Kathy's father sold all his cows to her brother Kevin, Kathy still helps her brother with milking and owns one Holstein cow herself.

Prior to the crowning of the princesses, 1981-82 State Dairy Princess Charlene Rohrer gave some remarks on her activities as state princess. She reminded the group, "It's not enough that we promote milk for one evening or even for one month. We must constantly remind the public to consume the real thing."

Michael Weimer, Pa. Holstein Association director of sales, served as Master of Ceremonies for the event. Judges were John Howard, a dairy farmer from Lancaster County and formerly with the Pa. Holstein Association; Cindy Neely, 1980 State Dairy Princess, and Lynn Tilton, senior editor for Pennsylvania Farmer.

Entertainment for the evening was a very enjoyable program presented by Deb Harnish, a ventriloquist from New Holland.

The event is organized annually by the Adams County Holstein Club. Cindy W. Zepp, New Oxford, served as committee chairman of the 1982 Dairy Princess Contest.

SUN area crowns Annette Shirey new dairy princess

LEWISBURG — Annette Shirey, the 17-year-old daughter of Mr and Mrs John Shirey of Beavertown, was named the 1982-83 dairy princess for the SUN area, June 19, at the Susquehanna Valley Mall

The SUN area, composed of Snyder, Union, and Northumberland counties, held their pageant in conjunction with a day-long fund promotion for future dairy promotional activities

Shirey, who lives on a 350-acre dairy farm, helps milk the 64 registered Holsteins and is the owner and breeder of five milking Holsteins and two heifers

The new princess is a junior at West Snyder High School and participates in the marching band color guard where she serves as captain. She is also a cheerleader,

Case tractors in the under 100 hp categories have long been known for reliability, economy and high performance Operate a new 90 series General Purpose tractor on your farm and you'll see first hand what a difference luxury seating, unexcelled visibility, standard 12-speed synchromesh transmission, simplified high capacity hydraulics, diff lock, hand and foot throttles and optional MFD — Mechanical Front Wheel Drive — can make.

You'll also sample the strength and responsiveness of a Case-built diesel engine with a reputation for fuel efficiency and dependability the Model 1190 has a 3-cylinder, 164 cu. in (2 7L) engine, the 1290 a 4-cylinder, 195 cu in. (3 2L) engine, the 1390 a 4-cylinder, 219 cu in (3.6L), the 1490 a 219 cu in. turbo (3.6L) engine, the 1690 a 6-cylinder, 329 cu in. (5 4L) engine.

Like all Case 90 series farm tractors, these General Purpose models are designed for Rapid Farming, with matched implements, at speeds of 5 mph (8 km/h) or faster and while most competitive tractors have only eight speeds, Case General Purpose tractors all have our 12-speed synchromesh transmission You get the right speeds for field tillage, orchard disking and spraying, cultivation, haying and harvesting All five models have standard differential lock The 1290, 1390, 1490 and 1690 are available with optional MFD — Mechanical Front Wheel Drive — that greatly enhances tractor performance in poor traction and slippery conditions Models 1490 and 1690 available in low profile or high platform design, 1190, 1290, 1390 are low profiles

MFD — Mechanical Front Wheel Drive Option

MFD gives you the important advantage of four wheels pulling for reduced rolling resistance and extra traction without duals It helps you stay on course and maintain proper speed in soft fields, dry or loose conditions Keeps you working with a loader around slick yards Case MFD has adjustable front wheel tread widths for row crops It's the all season advantage that belongs on your farm as a work speeder and an important factor in fuel economy

SUN area crowns Shirey

an honor student, and an active member of the West Snyder FFA Chapter — currently serving as SUN area FFA secretary

Following graduation, Shirey plans to attend college at Penn State to study pre-veterinary medicine

Alternate princess for the new year is Denise Benner of Middleburg, also in Snyder County

Denise is the 16-year-old daughter of Charles and Elaine Benner. She is a junior in high school.

The honored title of Miss Congeniality went to Crystal Knechel of Millmont, Union County.

Crystal is the 16-year-old daughter of Ray Knechel and Shirley Walter. She, too, is a junior in high school

Keith Martin, TV news anchorman, served as master of ceremonies.

Shirey will now have opportunity to compete in the state contest in Harrisburg on September 21.

Chester FFA elects officers

OXFORD — Officers for the coming year were recently elected by the Chester County FFA Association.

Heading the new slate of 1982-83 officers as Chester County president is Bill MacCauley, of the Octorara Chapter.

Other officers include Arnold Davis, of Oxford, vice president; Christina Soltys, of Owen J Roberts, secretary; Todd Berry, of Owne J. Roberts, treasurer; Bonnie Browning, of Oxford, reporter; Mark Stoltzfus, of Octorara, sentinel; Jane Drennan, of Oxford, chaplain; and John Hostetter, of Oxford, student advisor.

In other business at the annual spring meeting of the association, 10 FFA members were elevated from chapter farmers to the county farmer degree level.

County farmer degree holders from Oxford include Arnold Davis, Bonnie Browning, Jane Drennan, John Hostetter, Daniel Luoto, Randy McCardell and Lari England.

From Octorara, the new county farmers are Bill MacCauley and Mark Stoltzfus.

Todd Berry, of the Owen J. Roberts Chapter, also received the honor

Manor FFA conducts variety of activities

MILLERSVILLE — Members of the Manor FFA at Penn Manor High School have been quite busy in recent weeks with various chapter activities that have ranged from the cutting of firewood as a fund-raising effort to the selection of their project hogs.

Other activities have included participation in the selection of new county officers, field trip to Pennfield Feeds, engaging in a Food for America project, launching the annual pumpkin contest and participation in FFA Activities Week and Farm-City Week.

The wood cutting project was held at J. Wiker's in Conestoga. The large amount of wood will be seasoned and sold in the fall to raise funds for chapter activities.

A number of chapter members selected their project hogs in mid-May at the Lancaster Stockyards. The feeders will be finished over the summer for showing at various fairs in the fall.

Two members of the Manor FFA serving as county officers during the coming year are Merv Keagy, treasurer; and Tanya Green, corresponding secretary. Karen Long is also the recipient of a scholarship.

The chapter took a field trip to Pennfield facilities, including the mill in the Hemfield Industrial Park and the broiler plant at Fredericksburg, north of Lebanon.

The Annual Food for America Project was held at the Martic and Hambright Elementary Schools with chapter members displaying various animals and explaining their care and the on-farm origins of different kinds of food to the pupils. At the Martic School all of the grades participated in the program.

Representatives of the chapter also visited the fourth grades of the Letort, Conestoga, Martic, Eshleman, Pequea and Hambright Elementary Schools to explain the annual pumpkin contest. Each fourth grade student was given 12 seeds and their pumpkins will be judged in the fall to select the biggest and best.

In the Farm-City Week observance, the first-graders of Eshleman Elementary visited the Glenn Burkholder dairy farm.

Manor FFA participants in the various contests and other activities held at Penn State this week include.

Poultry judging – Brian Hess, Mike Appel, Brian Herr and Jeff Breneman.

Meats judging – Mike Acord and Junior Eckman

Chorus – Beth Snyder

State officer contest – Jeff Burkholder

Dairy judging – Colleen and Julie Brubaker

Md. 4-H Conference set for Chestertown

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Teenagers as a "Power Source of the Future" will be the theme for next week's third annual Maryland State 4-H Conference. The event is scheduled Monday through Thursday, at the campus of Washington College in Chestertown.

About 450 older 4-H members are expected to attend, according to Robert M. Reel, an Extension state 4-H program leader at the University of Maryland in College Park

Of this number, some 250 will be official delegates from Maryland's 23 counties and from Baltimore city. Others will be part-time participants in special events — including the state 4-H public speaking contest and statewide 4-H recognition program on Thursday

About 75 adults will participate in a 1½-day statewide 4-H volunteer leader forum on Wednesday and Thursday during the 4-H conference They will join the state 4-H recognition program on Thursday afternoon in the Fine Arts Center

Old and new members of the Maryland 4-H council will arrive at the state 4-H conference site a day early for an afternoon and evening plenary session in the Fine Arts Center on the Washington College campus

Those whose terms have expired will be honored during a recognition ceremony on Thursday morning, and the new council will be officially installed following the election compaign that day The outgoing president is Michael J Cooper, 18, of Bowie (Prince Georges county)

Members of the state 4-H council board of directors will preside at most program sessions during the state 4-H conference

Red Lion reports FFA winners

RED LION — Red Lion Area FFA members attended statewide competition and the summer convention during FFA Activities Week held at Penn State.

Of the 12 members entered in competition, 9 were in the top third. Three were gold medal winners, including Beth Holtzinger in prepared public speaking, Marie Deavers in conservation public speaking, and Wendy Flinchbaugh in livestock judging. Flinchbaugh placed tenth out of a field of 148 participants from across Pennsylvania.

Other Red Lion FFA winners were Edwina Johnson, silver in dairy judging; Ed Keeny and Jim Caudill, silvers in livestock judging; Tim Flory, bronze in poultry judging; Alan Taylor, bronze in dairy judging; and Gary Crowl, honorable mention in dairy judging.

The dairy judging team consisted of Johnson, Taylor, and Crowl placed ninth in team competition out of 53 teams

Competing, but, not placing in the top third were: Paul Garner in farm management, Bruce Robinson in poultry judging, and Melissa Peters in the job interview contest. Loren Hildebrand, vice president of the Red Lion FFA chapter and vice president of the York county FFA, represented the county as official delegate and served on the nominating committee.

NPPC challenges NAS report on diet/cancer

DES MOINES, Iowa — NPPC is challenging the diet/cancer report issued by the National Academy of Sciences and is requesting that the report be reviewed immediately by the Food and Nutrition Board of NAS. NPPC's Washington staff is working through key members of Congress to strengthen and reinforce the request for a review of the report.

While NAS feels there is sufficient evidence to justify the recommendations made Wednesday, several branches within NAS have published dietary recommendations that are in total disagreement.

At a recent international food and cancer seminar sponsored by the American Health Association's Food and Nutrition Committee, Dr. Lee Wattenburg, University of Minnesota Medical School said, "It is clearly premature to recommend anything (with regard to diet and cancer) to the general public at this point."

Last Wednesday's report is of paramount concern to the nation's pork producers as it advises the public to eat very little salt-cured foods and to eat increased amounts of fruits and vegetables. Yet in their December 1981 report, NAS stated that the greatest dietary source of nitrites was vegetables, while cured meats contained much less. Furthermore, they stated cured meats account for "only a small portion of the total exposure to nitrosamines."

Only two years ago, the Food and Nutrition Board of NAS reviewed much the same data and could find no causal relationship between nutrition and any type of cancer and could find no basis for recommending modification of the American diet at that time.

We find it very inconsistent that the recommendations made in the recent report are designed to reduce the risks of developing cancer, when the preface of the report says that "data are neither clear-cut nor complete." The report goes on to say that there is insufficient evidence to specify what percentage of cancer risks are attributable to diet, or how modifying the diet might lower the risk of cancer.

In the face of these conflicting reports from within the Academy, NPPC's major concern is that a thorough review involving the NAS Food and Nutrition Board be conducted as soon as possible.

The study by the National Academy of Sciences committee made the following diet recommendations to reduce cancer risk:

- Eat very little salt-cured, salt-pickled and smoked foods. Examples: sausage, smoked fish and ham, bacon, bologna and hot dogs.
- Reduce to 30% of diet foods high in saturated and unsaturated fats. Examples: fatty cuts of meat, whole-milk dairy products and cooking oils and fats.
- Do eat fruits, vegetables and whole-grain cereal products daily. Examples: Oranges, grapefruit, dark-green leafy vegetables, carrots, winter squash, tomatoes and vegetables in the cabbage family, such as cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower and Brussels sprouts.
- Drink alcohol only in moderation.

Area youth to take part in Farm Cooperative Institute

LANCATER — Six outstanding youths have been named winners in the Cooperative Business Education Program sponsored by the Lancaster Cooperative Council, and will represent this area at the Pennsylvnaia Association of Farm Cooperative Summer Youth Institute at Shippensburg State College, July 11-14.

Those named to attend the Institute are: Ronald L. Martin, R1, Narvon; Stephen D. Aument, R1, Quarryville; Debra Hershberger, R4, Quarryville; Carolyn L. Witmer, R2, East Earl; Clifford L. Horning, R1, Narvon; Dorothy Meyer, Willow Street.

Winners were selected on the basis of their knowledge of the business enterprise system in America; the cooperative way of doing business, and on activities of the participants identifying them with school, community, church, and youth organizations.

The Institute program is designed to teach youth more about the business enterprise system in the United States, to help in planning their future by pointing out career possibilities in agribusiness, and providing opportunities for individual leadership development.

Climax of the Institute will be the selection of delegates to attend the American Institute of Cooperation's annual youth conference at Purdue University, August 1-5.

Can diet increase chance of cancer?

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Can diet affect a person's chance of developing cancer?

A recent report released by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences suggests so. But the report also warns that "it is not now possible, and may never be possible, to specify a diet that protects all people against all forms of cancer."

Prepared by the Committee on Diet, Nutrition and Cancer, the report contains interim dietary guidelines that may possibly reduce the risk of cancer.

"It's important that the public clearly understands what the report and guidelines state — and what they don't state," said National Dairy Council President M. F. Brink. "They don't state, for instance, that any food can cause or cure cancer. Nor do they state that we should eliminate any particular foods from our diet."

What the report does state, among other recommendations, is that Americans should include whole grain food products, fruits and vegetables in their daily diet while cutting back somewhat on total fat intake. The report, however, does not recommend that fat be eliminated from the diet.

"It's an essential nutrient," said Brink, "But too much of any nutrient, of course, can have harmful health effects. Take, for instance, vitamin A. The Research Council's report suggests that vitamin A may play a role in cancer prevention. But the report specifically recognizes that too much vitamin A is toxic and, thus, hazardous to your health.

"So, the key is moderation. More isn't any better than less when it comes to balanced nutrition."

Brink also stressed that the National Cancer Institute has found no direct cause-effect relationship between nutrition and cancer in humans. But total diet, he added, may nonetheless play an indirect role in reducing the risk of cancer.

"A diet that provides you with adequate amounts of all the nutrients and energy you need is an important defense against cancer and other diseases," said Brink. "The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council has emphasized this. So has National Dairy Council."

Brink said the best way to get the proper amounts of nutrients and energy needed for optimal health is by eating a variety of foods in moderation from the four basic food groups — milk, meat, fruits and vegetables, and grains.

The dairy industry is actively involved in expanding our knowledge about the relationship between diet and cancer," said Brink. "Through National Dairy Council's Grant-in-Aid Program, we support research in this area."

UEP's McCharen speaks out on cholesterol, the industry, herself

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — Whatever became of cholesterol?

That was the question Cathy McCharen, director of nutrition and consumer affairs for United Egg Producers' Washington office attempted to answer last week at the annual Pa Poultry Federation Egg Conference at the Host Corral.

Speaking before a group of over 300 producers, McCharen noted that sodium is the dietary hoodlum of 1982 as dictated by government legislation and thinking, but that cholesterol, unfortunately, was still in the forefront of the consumer's mind.

McCharen blamed the large percentage of misunderstanding on advertisers — specifically television advertising, and the news media.

McCharen said that research still hasn't answered the question one way or another concerning the belief that dietary cholesterol leads to heart disease, despite increased publicity over two studies purported to provide the final proof of the connection.

"The press blew the results out of proportion," she said, "and advertisers of polyunsaturated products took advantage of the publicity.

"What can we do about this publicity?" she asked the audience, then immediately followed with this idea: "Well we could challenge the advertisers, but they have more money than UEP could generate to pay for the challenge."

Following her delivery before the producers, McCharen noted in a personal interview that a private goal for her work in the future would be to have an ongoing public relations campaign to educate the public about the cholesterol/egg controversy. "I'd also like to do a good solid survey on the medical community. . we need to reach physicians and show consumers that nobody recommends avoidance."

As it stands now, 'official' advice to the public regarding dietary cholesterol is unchanged. . McCharen noted that "USDA/DHHS Dietary Guidelines still recommend that we avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol."

McCharen noted that the guidelines will soon undergo extensive scientific review and changes may come in the future. "Rather than wait for the review committee's decision," McCharen told the group, "UEP developed its own set of guidelines" which include moderation in fat intake.

But this 29-year-old brunette, emanating an air of extreme confidence in her subject and her work, happily told the audience that the latest report from the National Academy of Sciences linking diet to cancer mentions no negative factors for the egg producers. "We're safe as far as I can see," she asserted.

McCharen said that the report included nothing which disagrees with or negates any recommendation UEP has made in its Diet and Health brochure.

"One significant aspect of the committee's statement is that total fat is implicated," McCharen said. "The public should be informed that the increase in total fat consumption over the last 50 years has come from vegetable sources In addition, fats and oils contribute 43 percent of the fat in our diet and very few other nutrients. All types of meat combined contribute 36 percent of the fat, dairy contributes 11.2 percent. Eggs, on the other hand, contribute only about 3 percent of the total fat in our diet, so restricting egg consumption would have an insignificant effect on total fat consumption."

About McCharen

When she had finished addressing the producers, she walked from the Corral's ballroom right into a side room, never changing personalities, never sighing a breath of relief.

She attributes this calm rapport with her audience to "loving my job."

"I feel no fear when I address an

WHAT THIS MAN KNOWS ABOUT FARMING COULD FILL A BOOK... A BANK BOOK.

Farming. It's a complex business No surprise to you, of course. We only mention it because when it comes to getting a farm loan, we know you don't want to have to start at ground zero and explain the expenses of livestock, machinery, construction, mortgages and operating expenses to a novice loan officer.

Which is why we suggest you turn to Bob Badger, the head of our Agricultural Loan Division. Bob knows farming — inside out and upside down He's been helping our community's farmers meet their business objectives for years So when it comes to farm loans, he takes a very interesting point of view yours.

Next time you need to talk to a banker about financing your business, talk to the banker who understands your business . Bob Badger at Bank of Lancaster County Visit Bob at our Strasburg office or give him a call and ask him to visit you.

audience because I enjoy it and I'm there to help them. I love nutrition, and when you know your subject, it helps you enjoy teaching it and delivering it," she stated matter-of-factly.

"I feel a sense of give-and-take with my audience. . they know I'm there to help them, fighting for them everyday in Washington"

But McCharen admits to having doubts at one time. ."I never dreamed that the food industry could use me with my background. I majored in nutrition in college thinking that the only thing I'd be able to do with the degree was be a dietician and work in a hospital. The food industry is so diverse, it has so many opportunities," she said.

Her bachelor's degree came from Oklahoma State under the title of human nutrition. Following this she completed some graduate work at the University of Missouri

Her initial interest in nutrition comes from, she laughingly admitted, a summer job she held for three months in her home town of Tulsa, Oklahoma. "I sold vitamins door to door for a company and told my buyers all the impressive things they told me about the vitamins. I was so intrigued with what these vitamins could do for you that I decided to study nutrition.

"Well, as it turned out, I discovered that about 90 percent of what the company told me was a lie," she smiled.

When asked about her work with the UEP, McCharen's back straightens in a gesture of pride and she begins verbalizing all the ways in which she and her two co-workers in Washington try to help egg producers.

"We're always open for suggestions," said McCharen, "and everyone is welcome to get in touch with me at any time. We want to hear from people. . we're not up on any pedestal. We advise, we listen. Our credibility is on whether we give good information or not. We try hard"

Though her position may seem like a 24-hour-a-day job, she admits to keeping the UEP's McCharen separate with the private McCharen she is. The underlying trait pulling the two lives of this one individual together is her enthusiasm. She tackles the challenges in her private life with the same determination and desire she employs in business.

In keeping with her fitness and nutrition education, McCharen finds time to work out at the spa three days a week, has recently invested in her own home and has added a puppy to her list of favorites

"I spend time with my dog, my boyfriend, fixing my house always incorporating my education into my life, but only pounding and preaching when I'm at the office," she said. And no, she doesn't go home and battle arguments with her neighbors about cholesterol versus the egg industry. For her it's enough just holding one of the top positions in the UEP — a position she holds with ardent fervor.

Control weeds around strawberry plants

LANCASTER — What can be done to minimize weed problems in your strawberries?

— Use an integrated weed control plan. This includes avoiding sites which are infested with persistant weeds such as quackgrass, nutsedge, chickweed and galinsoga. Eradicate these problems one or two years before plantings by using currently approved herbicide combinations. Consult current Extension recommendations for the latest recommendations

— Apply Enide last week in June - (about 2 weeks before the daughter plants firmly root) Rooting begins in earnest by mid-July Clean-cultivate (shallow) as you apply Enide to eliminate germinated weeds and to loosen soil for runner-plant rooting and to incorporate the herbicide

— Apply Decthal in early September before winter weeds germinate (this should keep chickweed from germinating)

— Apply either Enide or Devrinol just before mulching (about Thanksgiving time) — to keep down germinating cereal grain from the mulch and further suppress chickweed

— Sixty days before harvest in the spring apply either Tenoran (especially if chickweed is established — it burns it back) or Enide and Tenoran if lambsquarters and crabgrass are expected to be serious problems by harvest

— Start planting early (March or April) before weeds become too prevalent Once a planting is started never allow weeds to go to seed — If they are missed by the herbicides, then pull or hoe weeds out from between the plants The new "wick" herbicide applicators may be used to "touch up" pockets of persistant weeds

— Prevent weed germination by pre-plant incorporation (or over the top of the transplants) with Dacthal Incorporate into top inch of soil then irrigate to seal-in the herbicide

Cattlemen's field day

DOWNINGTOWN — The 1982 Summer Cattlemen's field day will be held Saturday, July 31 here at Devereux-Soleil Farms. This annual event, co-sponsored by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, Penn State, the Pa Department of Agriculture, the Pa Forage and Grassland Council, and, this year, the Devereux Foundation, is scheduled to begin with a 9 30 a m registration

The Devereux-Soleil operation consists of 300 purebred Angus cows and has made extensive use of cattle performance records for a number of years Along with their cow/calf operation, the farm also raises approximately 400 head of cattle on feedlot The majority of these finished cattle are processed at the farm's own slaughter house and used in the Devereux schools.

The cattle herds and feedlot operation will be featured during the coming field day, along with the farm's silage and grain handling systems, ration formulations, no-till seeding methods, double-cropping, herd health, parasite control, and other topics of interest to beef cattle producers

Field day participants will be able to share in a pit barbeque for lunch

Pelly describes Royal Farms at Windsor Castle

FORT COLLINS, Colo — For 20 years he was engaged in personal service to the Queen of England. He was Her Majesty's land steward and was responsible for managing the Royal Farms at Windsor Castle

Retired since 1971, Adrian Pelly, MVO (Member Victorian Order), recently was on the Colorado State University campus to participate in Colorado's State 4-H Conference.

He presented prints from a series of paintings of Windsor Castle to the top livestock judge and top dairy judge The originals are by mid-18th century artist Paul Sandby, and early English watercolorist noted for his rural scenes of Windsor Castle.

Pride was obvious as Pelly talked about the Royal Farms at the royal family's country residence "Windsor is what I like to look at as an overgrown home farm," said the former manager.

Started in the 1800s for the royal family's enjoyment, Windsor Castle's farms, grow cereal crops — wheat, barley, oats — and maintain two dairy herds, beef cattle, sheep, pigs, chickens and turkeys.

The dairy cattle are a subject that Pelly enjoys talking about. Windsor Castle maintains a herd of Jerseys and a herd of Guernseys. Pelly said the Jersey herd is "one of the best in the world and one of the longest established " The herd can be traced back to 1879 in volumes of the society's herd book Pelly said it probably existed as a he. d before that.

The farm produced a "lot of show-winning cattle and high-producing cows," said Pelly Queen Elizabeth knows good stock, he added She "was a very fine and knowledgeable woman" and showed a "great interest in farming."

He proudly noted, "She has a trait every good stockman should have She is so observant." He remembered that she would ask about specific operations, animals or changes made at the farm

The retired agricultural manager said the royal family enjoys the farm They spend most weekends there unless they are overseas or at one of two private residences — Sandringham or Balmoral Castle — properties bought by Queen Victoria and Prince Albert.

He recalled several amusing anecdotes from years when the princes were young.

Andrew and Edward, when gathering eggs, often would pick out one egg each for themselves. The boys would mark their eggs with a pencil and put one egg each in their mother's gloves for the trip back to London. When they got home, the Queen would have each boy's egg cooked for him. Pelly remembered one visit when the eggs did not make it back to Buckingham Palace but ended up scrambled in the Queen's gloves

He also remembered a young Prince Charles picking up a hen and looking at the underside of her, asking, "Where does the egg come from?"

The popular Prince Charles has a reputation for participating in everyday activites That evidently has been his way for years. During a visit to Windsor Castle when he was about 10, Prince Charles came up missing. Pelly and Prince Phillip found him in the dairy barn. Although the dairy then had milking machines, Prince Charles was milking by hand. His father asked him what he was doing, and the young prince replied, "Learning to milk." when Phillip asked, "Whatever for?" Charles said, "You never know when it might come in handy."

When Pelly began his duties at Windsor Castle in 1951, the farm ran a van to Buckingham Palace in London every morning to deliver milk, cream, cheeses, butter and eggs. Poultry, sides of bacon and cuts of lamb were delivered weekly.

Changing times have affected the Royal Farms. Pelly said, "When refrigerators and freezers became used more, we made the trip every other day." Today those trips are even less frequent.

Buckingham Palace, Pelly recalled, used individual pats of butter at dinner. Frequently the farm would get a call for 5 or 6 pounds of butter for a special dinner the next day. This meant that 330 to 396 individual pats had to be formed and hand-stamped. "We tried to get 66 pats per pounds," said Pelly.

Pelly considered himself a "farm husbandman." His policy was to make each unit of the farm self-contained. In 1951, he had 25 or 26 employees on the 700-plus acres. When he retired 20 years later, that number had been cut in half. "As agriculture changed, we needed fewer employees, but we didn't let any go; the people retired naturally," he said.

Pelly and his wife, Margaret, are in the United States to attend the British Faire in Denver. He was invited to lecture about farming done by the kings and queens of England.

Since his retirement, Pelly has been consulting. He specializes in farm and estate insurance through Lloyds of London.

Potato harvest begins

BRIDGETON, N.J — Once again, Cherry Lane Farm, of R3, Bridgeton, N J. is an entrant in the informal sweepstakes for the earliest area potato harvesting.

Raymond H. Bare Jr. began digging operations on Cherry Lane Farm on Monday. And "Superior" described not only the variety being harvested, but also a one-word description of the status of the crop.

Approximately 30 acres of Superiors are being harvested for marketing through the Cherry Lane Farm market, which also carries other home-grown seasonal produce, including cauliflower, broccoli, peas, asparagus, string beans, wax beans and beets.

Beneficial insects are nature's pest control

NEWARK, Del — As mankind's ecological mistakes become more apparent, it's reassuring to know that nature has its own ways of preventing some destructive insects from overpopulating the environment. By maintaining conditions favorable to insect predators and parasites, farmers and homeowners can help these beneficial insects be more effective as pest control agents.

"The use of natural enemies against important insect pests is nothing new," says University of Delaware Extension entomologist Frank Boys "Entomologists have been using this practice for years."

Some of the most important beneficial insects native to this area are ladybird beetles (ladybugs), lacewings, ground beetles, praying mantids, dragonflies, wasps, syrphid flies (flower flies), ant lions (doodlebugs) and lightning bugs In order to take full advantage of these helpful insects, one must be able to recognize them and protect them from indescriminate pesticide use Except in cases of a severe outbreak, many crop pests can be effectively controlled by natural predators, if these are present

Here is some information from Boys to help you make the most of the beneficial insects in your yard or fields.

LADYBIRD BEETLES OR LADYBUGS–These small, bright orange-red (or yellow) beetles with their black (or white) wing spots are familiar to almost everyone But many people are not familiar with the immature or larval stage of the insect, which is just as important as the adult in keeping down the "bad guys " The larvae of most ladybug species are blue-back and orange and they're alligator-shaped Eggs of the beetle are yellowish-orange and spindle-shaped Females lay anywhere form 300 to 1500 eggs during their lifetime, depositing the eggs in compact clusters on foliage or ground litter

Both adults and larvae feed chiefly on aphids, but they also eat scale insects, mealybugs, spider mites and small egg masses of other insects A few even eat mildews A single beetle may consume more than 5,000 aphids during its lifetime

LACEWINGS–Named for its gauzy green lace wings, this insect has jewel-like gold eyes and produces aphid-devouring larvae The grayish-brown larvae are about three-eighths of an inch long, with sharp curved jaws that extend beyond their head They feed on aphids, scales, mealybugs, thrips, mites and insect eggs The larva's appetite seems to increase with each pest consumed, says Boys It can eat a hundred or more insects a day

PRAYING MANTIDS--These exotic-looking insects feed on a variety of insects They wait to ambush their prey with front legs held in the raised position that gives them their name They're also cannibalistic If food isn't plentiful, they will eat each other until only one remains Though the mantis has been observed on field and garden crops, Boys says its value as a predator appears to be more in control of harmful meadow and pasture insects such as crickets and grasshoppers

Other beneficial insects that farmers and gardeners should try to protect are syrphid flies, ground beetles, dragonflies, wasps, ant lions and lightning bugs

Ambush gets exemptions

WILMINGTON, Del. — The Environmental Protection Agency has granted Section 18 Emergency Exemptions to the states of Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey and Virginia for the use of Ambush (R) insecticide to control Colorado potato beetle on tomatoes.

Under the Exemptions, Ambush may be used at a rate of 0.1 to 0.2 pounds ai per acre applied by either ground or aerial application equipment. The Exemptions have different expiration dates. In Delaware, Ambush may be applied until July 15, in Virginia until Oct. 1, in Maryland until Oct. 15 and in New Jersey applications may be made until Sept 30.

Ambush is manufactured by ICI Americas Inc. Charles Nash, product manager for the synthetic pyrethroid, said, "Ambush has been used successfully to control many crop pests. Since the Colorado potato beetle can be devastating to tomato plants, I'm glas we will be able to offer growers some help."

Seed-selling 'giant' retires after 60 years

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

ELIZABETHTOWN — What makes a good seed salesman?

With a chuckle in his voice and a twinkle in his eye, Lester L. Erb – who is retiring after 60 years with Hoffman Seeds, Inc., of Landisville – says it helps to be short.

"My father was about five-foot, two," he explained

"And I'm only a little bigger at five-foot, four.

"They like us little guys to take pictures in the fields.

But the success and satisfaction of his six-decade career with Hoffman Seeds, which began way back in 1922, goes well beyond Erb's physical size.

While the family stature may be a bit on the short side, the Erb status in the seed business ranks them among the seed-selling giants.

Resident of 312 S. Mt Joy St., Elizabethtown, Erb began his lengthy career with Hoffman's working parttime in the warehouse.

His late father, Clayton B. Erb, was already employed as the company's first salesman when he started the long association not long after the dawning of the "Roaring Twenties."

Together, the seed selling spanned the days of the open-pollinated corn through the introduction of the hybrids to the current high-powered varieties that can be matched to just about every imaginable growing or climatic condition.

"In the beginning, I worked in the warehouse primarily in the spring and fall," Lester Erb said.

"We'd fill the bags of seed and sew them shut. Using bag wagons, we'd load them on trucks and take them to the railroad station in Landisville."

Before the days of the hybrids, Erb can remember helping to collect open-pollinated seed corn from area farmers, at first in company with his father.

"We'd go to the farmers we knew were good growers," he said.

"Of course, corn was kept in a crib then. We'd let in run out and pick out the ears best suited for seed

"We'd do this in January and February and it used to be blistering cold at times

"Then, we'd take the ears back to the seed house for drying."

But the introduction of the hybrids changed all of that.

Erb's father had built up a clientele of possibly a thousand customers in Lebanon and Dauphin counties, since he began selling in the 20's

"One day in 1941 the boss called him in and said he couldn't see all those people since we were going to be selling the hybrids.

"Some other salesmen were hired and he asked if I wanted to sell."

Thus, Lester Erb began his seed-selling career in earnest that essentially became a series of numbers over the years.

In the earlier days, it had been a name – Lancaster Sure Crop – a corn variety that many old-timers recall yet with fond memories.

G-91 – one of the first of the Funk's hybrids that was brought in from the West.

G-94 – a later variety that was among the favorites of area farmers.

G-4646 -- a variety that dominated sales during the 70's.

In addition to his selling activities in areas that included Lebanon County, Landisville and the Millersville to Washington Boro section, Erb carried out numerous other assignments with Hoffman's

"I just joked with them the other day that I managed to do just about everything except write the checks," Erb said.

One of these other jobs involved trying to keep an eye on a couple hundred kids during the early days of the hybrids when the seed was still grown in ths area.

"We'd use a couple hundred kids when it came time to detassel in July," Erb said.

"I'd drive a bus all over, picking them up in Lebanon, at the Hotel Brunswick in Lancaster or Elizabethtown.

"The farm boys and girls were the best workers, but it was hard trying to keep an eye on some of them.

(Turn to Page B37)

Fair time, such as Lebanon, found Lester Erb manning Hoffman display.

Ag-Chem cites advances

MINNEAPOLIS, Mn. – Advances in the sub-surface application of suspension fertilizers have been announced by Ag-Chem Equipment Co., Inc., of Minneapolis, Mn.

In addition, Ag-Chem reports the start of construction on its latest Action Center in Bloomington, Ill. This growing network of centers includes a facility at East Petersburg.

Sub-surface applicators for suspension fertilizers are now compatible with Terra-Gator, Terra-Truck and Ag-Gator self-propelled application machines from Ag-Chem. These three, four and five-wheel machines are equipped with proper gear selectivity and heavy-duty components to offer long-life in sub-surface applications.

Sub-surface placement implements include a variety of owner-provided or specified pulled field tools.

A new Ag-Chem metering system, which is clog resistant, delivers uniform suspension output from knife to knife and increases accuracy over currently available systems.

The new Bloomington Action Center is expected to be completed in December. These Action Centers offer a broad range of parts and the full line of Ag-Chem self-propelled applicators, along with tractor-mounted and towed farm sprayers.

"Those fields in the Cornwall-Annville or Landisville area might be a half-mile long. The corn was twice as tall as the kids and they had to reach up and pull the tassels out.

"You just couldn't see them I'd walk to the end of the row and there I might find them sitting around.

"But I had a lot of fun with the kids. too.

"I'm quite a baseball fan and always took a radio along. Sometimes when the Star Spangled Banner played, I'd stop the bus and tell them all to jump to attention."

The kid-detasseling brigade continued from about 1941 to 1957 when Hoffman's moved their seed growing operations west to locations in Illinois.

"I remember those last few years particularly well," Erb said.

"It was terribly dry in both 1955 and 1957."

Another annual assignment was the selection of the ears of corn that would be displayed at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. And Erb would also help man the Hoffman booth

"Years ago, I guess we went in more for gimmicks to attract the attention of the farmers," he said.

"One year, we had a horse there with a corn planter

"Then, we had a money wheel It must have had about $700 fixed to it with a sign: Plant Hoffman Seed, It Makes Money for You. People would stand and just watch it go round and round.

"When the polaroids first came out, we took photos of farmers at the stand "

In addition to the State Farm Show, Erb also manned Hoffman displays at local fairs, such as Lebanon

Assignments, such as these, and many more show that Erb's lengthy association with the seed business goes well beyong the family trait of being short for good crop pictures.

He was born into it and literally sprouted and grew with it, much like the seed he sold He knows the business inside and out and from the ground floor up, or more appropriately from the seed that's placed in the soil to the tassel that sways gently in a summer breeze

And, like his father, took a sincere interest in serving his customers

'The only other thing that is needed is a good seed product," Erb, said

"And, we've always had that at Hoffman's "

The succeeding generations of countless area farmers whose annual corn crop began with a pre-planting Erb visit will attest to all of these

White introduces chisel plow

OAKBROOK, Il — White Farm Equipment Company introduces the new 420 series chisel plows, a stronger, heavier line of chisel plows from 8 to 56 feet wide

"These new chisel plows provide exceptional strength and durability,," says Roger Hipwell, Director of Marketing Services

The performance of the 420 series has also been improved, providing better trash flow and ground clearance "

For increase strength, all of the 420 series frames are now built with 4" x 6" x ¼" steel box beams, up to 80 percent stronger (vertical loading strength) than the 4" x 4' x ¼" beams on most competitive machines In addition, the frame, has 25 percent more weld area at every joint than 4" x 4" beams

Trash flow has been improved as the deeper 90" frame (front to back) lets trash flow freely between and around the shanks Ground clearance is improved, and the spring trip clamp assembly allows chisels to clear up to an 11" obstruction

To make plowing easier and more accurate, the new chisel plows feature longer drawbars, matched to the model and width, reducing the skewing motion possible with this type of implement To keep the chisel working depths more uniform, and to reduce the tendency of the chisel plow to lope, improved walking beams are standard on most models, and available on all models

The 420 series chisel plows are available in widths from 8 feet to 56 feet, in mounted or pull-type, folding or non-folding models

Maximize fertilizer value of dairy manure

NEWARK, Del. — Dairy manure contains valuable amounts of nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, as well as several essential micronutrients. Farmers who use manure on their field corn can reduce their fertilizer bills by including these nutrients when calculating the crop's needs, says Ross Harris, Extension specialist in environmental quality at the University of Delaware.

Application rates should be based on the composition of the manure, the method of application, soil test results, and plant needs, he says. The total amount of manure and commercial fertilizer applied should not exceed the nutrient requirements of the crop. Excess nutrients mean wasted money.

To control application rates of animal wastes, a manure spreader must be properly calibrated. There are many ways to do this, says Harris. Several procedures are described in a fact sheet on "Manure Spreader Calibration" which is available from county extension offices in Newark, Dover and Georgetown.

"Some farmers who land apply manure are over-applying nutrients from commercial fertilizers," says Harris. "This wastes money, may cause a nutrient imbalance in the soil, and increases the possibility that nutrients may leach into groundwater."

Continued applications of dairy manure on the same field will result in a build-up of phosphorus and potassium. To avoid this, rotate manure applications every two to three years, or as a soil test indicates.

To reduce nitrogen losses from surface-applied manure, disk or plow it in as soon after application as possible, advises the specialist.

Up to 30 percent of the nitrogen in the manure can be lost within the first three days after surface application if this is not done. Disking immediately after application reduces losses to less than 10 percent.

"The key to maximizing the value of dairy manure is a good nutrient management program," Harris says. To get top savings and performance, he advises farmers to develop a fertilizer program based on a soil test, crop need and the nutrient content of the manure.

SIDE DRESS "N" YES, WE CAN

WHY —

1 - Corn populations are heavy. Every seed germinated and emerged
2 - Some of you may have "Short Changed" the pre-plant nitrogen rates
3 - We have lost NITROGEN because of leaching and de-nitrofication. Side-dressing can insure your yields.
4 - Penn State says, Do It

HOW —

1 - Liquid nitrogen custom applied between the rows with a 3-point mounted applicator with drop nozzles
2 - Trailer type ammonia applicators that pull with your tractor

Case adds front drive option

RACINE, Wisc. — J I Case announces the availability of Mechanical Front Drive as a factory-installed option to provide four-wheel power for the 108 PTO HP model 2090 and 129 PTO HP model 2290 agricultural tractors.

The MFD option has been solely engineered for Case 2090 and 2290 tractors with 12-speed range power shift transmissions. It is operational in all speed ranges in both forward and reverse. A standard limited slip differential is included with the Mechanical Front Drive to give the machine extra traction in extremely bad conditions. Three oversized front tire options are offered: 13.6 x 28-, 14.9 x 28-, or 16 9 x 28-in. tires.

The front axle is equipped with outboard planetary final drives so final gear reduction takes place at the wheels, where the torque is most needed. Outboard planetaries also provide easier access to planetary gears for simple, fast service and reduced maintenance time.

For situations where four-wheel drive operation is not required, the front axle can easily be disengaged to operate as a conventional two-wheel drive tractor A shift lever is conveniently located on the right-hand console in the tractor cab

The front axle features four adjustable front-wheel tread settings from 75- to 91-in It allows the versatility needed for row crop work, for primary tillage operations and loader applications.

Narrow row beans top conventional

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Recent tests at the University of Maryland Poplar Hill Research Farm indicate that no-till double-cropped soybeans planted in especially narrow rows can outyield conventional beans planted in 30-inch rows.

According to Ronald Mulford, manager of the research farm, the university wanted to test no-till double-cropped soybeans in rows narrower than 20 inches — a widely used width in narrow-row beans. The results, he noted, are compiled over only two years of testing, but indicate higher yields are possible than with conventional width double-cropped beans.

Past research at other universities has proven the viability of 20-inch rows, so Mulford geared his research to include not only the 20-inch width in no-till beans, but six and 12-inch widths as well. Comparisons were made to control plots planted conventionally in 30-inch rows.

In 1980, no-till narrow-row plots averaged 30 bushels per acre Conventional yields tallied at 20.4 bushels per acre. In 1981 the yield difference was not nearly so pronounced; but, again, all combinations of narrow-row plantings, when averaged together, had greater yields than conventional double-cropped beans in the 30-inch rows.

The 20-inch rows were planted at a rate of six seeds per foot using an Allis Chalmers 600 no-till planter. The six and 12-inch row rates were two and four seeds per foot, respectively, and were planted with a Haybuster 1206 no-till drill.

The herbicide program was held constant in all row widths for the no-till plots. Each plot was treated with Ortho Paraquat CL at one quart per acre; Lorox at one pound per acre, and Lasso at 1.5 quarts per acre. The three herbicides were applied as preemergents. Ortho X-77 Spreader was used with the Paraquat at a rate of 16 ounces per 100 gallons.

Great Plains wind erosion down sharply

WASHINGTON, D C — Wind damaged less than half as much land in the Great Plains from November 1981 through May 1982 as it did during the same period a year earlier, a U S Department of Agriculture official reported last week

Peter C Myers, chief of the USDA's Soil Conservation Service, said reports from the 10-state area indicate wind damaged 5,107,985 acres, down sharply from 12,488,237 wind-damaged acres for the same seven months a year earlier

Myers attributed the drop in damaged acres to good snow cover and adequate soil moisture

Of the total land reported damaged, 91 percent, 4,653,338 acres was cropland, 8 percent, 381,200 acres was rangeland, and 1 percent, 73,447 acres was other land

On the road again

Marvin helps keep milk a quality product

This is the last in a four-part series entitled, "On the road again." Throughout June dairy month we have attempted to feature some of the dairy service people who provide a valuable service to the industry. This week we travel with Andy Marvin, a field man or milk inspector for a large dairy co-op.

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

EPHRATA — He doesn't wear a striped shirt. He doesn't carry a yellow flag in his back pocket. And there's no shiny whistle around his neck.

But occasionally, Andy Marvin has to cry "foul" when he walks into a barn.

However, this field man who sometimes has to don a referee cap when it comes to milk quality, considers himself more a team player than the ump.

"There's no one facet that is any more important than the other," Marvin says. "We're all in this thing together and we're here to put out a quality product the consumer will accept."

He admits his primary service to dairy farmers is to help them prevent milk quality problems.

"But to a number of guys, you're a policeman," Marvin notes. Secondly, Marvin explains that he's a direct link between producers and their co-op and must keep them abreast of their co-op's policies and news.

The Carbon County native sets off this morning to check on producers with high bacteria counts. According to Marvin, a producer can get into legal problems with a bacteria count of more than 100,000 per milliliter. However, the field man doesn't wait that long before he calls on his shippers. At the first hint of 50,000, he's out there trouble shooting.

At his first stop, he is greeted by the farmer. Brandishing his trusty flashlight, Marvin begins to search out the problems.

Before long, he spots one area of trouble. The milker pails could use a little extra elbow grease when they are cleaned. Andy explains the problem to the farmer as he shows him the build-up of milk film. Once the problem is discovered, Andy removes his referee cap as he and the farmer engage in pleasant conversation about the upcoming season.

As Andy enters the second barn of the morning, there is no friendly, "good morning," to greet him. Instead, he conducts his investigation alone. Marvin notes that he encounters the farmer only about 50 percent of the time.

In just a few minutes, Marvin has the milkers disassembled Cause of the high bacteria count, he explains, are incorrectly assembled pulsators. The equipment has trapped milk underneath valves. Before he departs, Andy leaves a note for the farmer.

"Disassemble milker parts and pulsator daily Clean and sanitize properly after each milking," he writes

His third stop, finds Andy alone again, while the farmer can be seen at a distance planting late corn. This time he finds worn milk hoses and improperly working valves. As he checks the condition of the receiver jar, Andy slides a little on the floor.

"That's one indication that the floor isn't very clean," Marvin explains. Not unlike Zorro, Marvin leaves his mark, a note which calls for better washing practices and new milk hoses, and is gone.

But many times, his trouble shooting isn't all finger-pointing. Marvin drives up to a small family farm, shortly before lunch because the farmer had suspected a problem with his water. Andy fetches a water sample from the milk house and in just a few days, both he and the farmer will know the results.

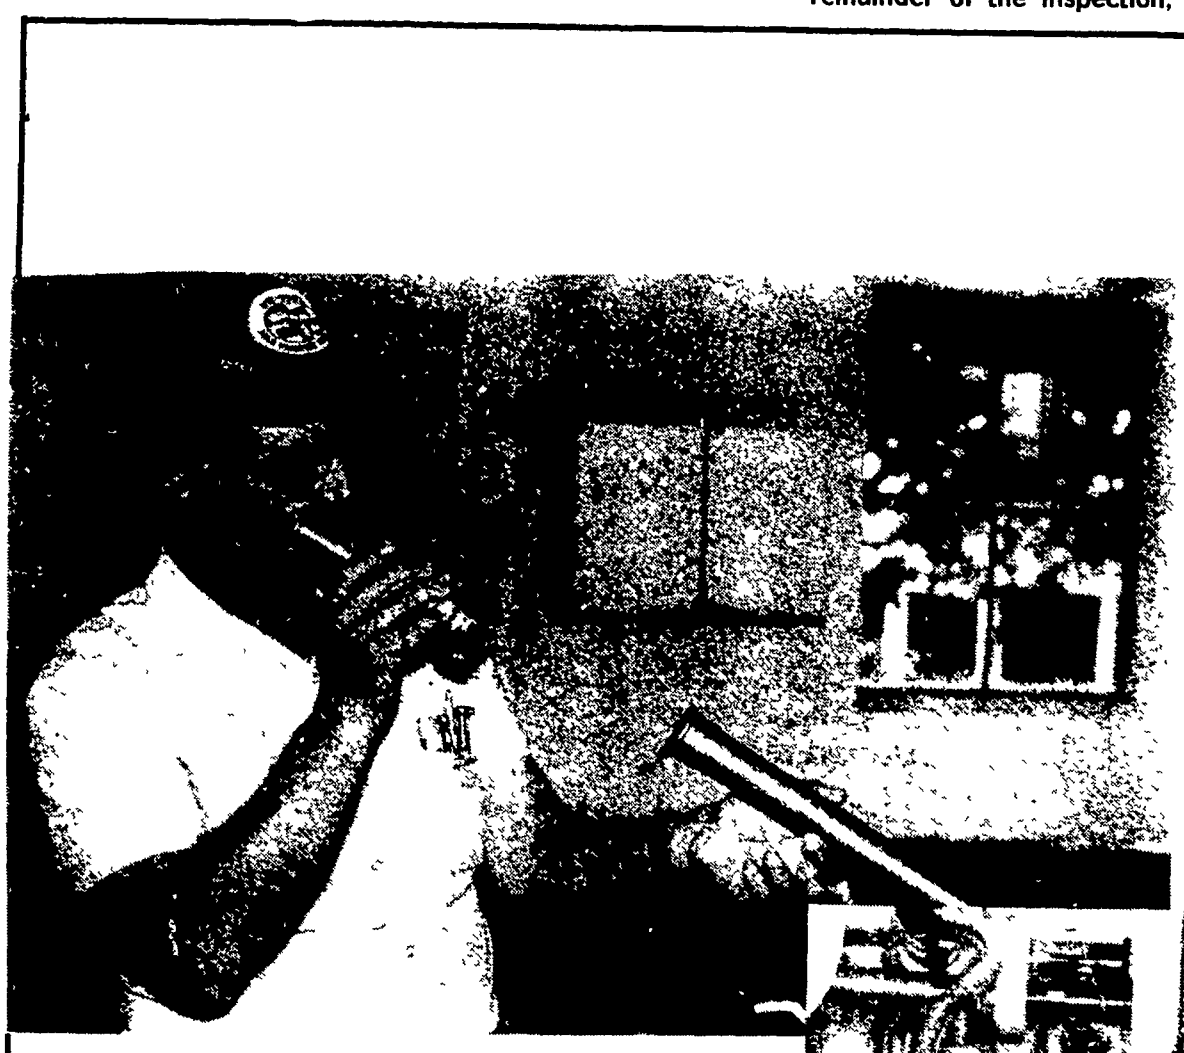
Marvin admits he enjoys helping people.

"You want to prevent problems rather than cure them. One of the most unpleasant tasks I have is to shut a guy off," Marvin says.

Confronting a farmer with such news requires a diplomatic approach, a quality that Andy has had to use in his 30 years as a field man.

(Turn to Page C4)

Before heading into the barn for the remainder of the inspection, Marvin lingers near the sight of the sewage tank and looks for signs of leaking and finds everything in order.



Andy spends a great deal of time hunting spots where a brush may have missed. The trouble-shooting inspector admits that he'd prefer to shed light on preventing problems rather than curing them. Here, he examines the insides of a worn inflation, a stainless steel milk line and a bulk tank which Marvin discovered was cooling too well. His first clue was frozen milk along the tank sides.

Talk to the man who knows forage handling systems.

Badger has been building forage equipment for over 30 years. They know what it takes to make forage equipment that is profitably efficient. And they know what is needed to make forage farming profitable.

Badger Dealers also offer the best finance and interest waiver programs, making your equipment easier to purchase.

In season waiver of forage equipment till November 1, 1982.

It's easy to understand why you'll never see a Badger Box in "the forage box graveyard".

You can't buy a better box than Badger's. Start with specially treated acid resistant exterior grade plywood, bolted to steel channel stakes. No nails anywhere. Add to that a tough welded and bolted undercarriage built to carry the big loads. Match all this with Badger's simple and reliable heavy roller chain drive, a beater design that delivers a smooth even discharge to the blower. And then mount it on Badger's own heavy duty single or tandem axle running gear and you've got a box that will stand up to the toughest punishment.

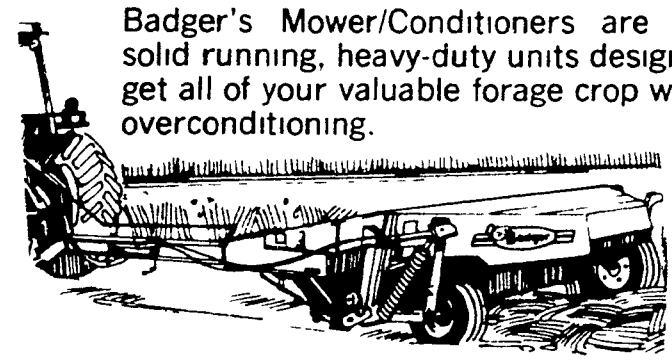
NOW Badger Northland dealers offer leasing on all equipment.

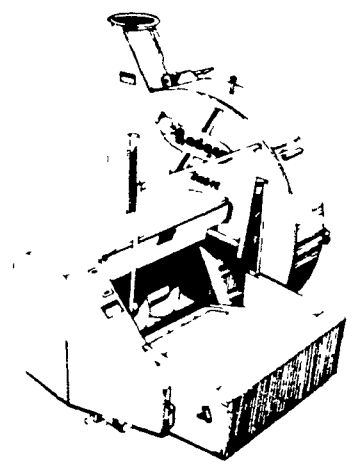
Badger's Mower/Conditioner...ground hugging, clean cutting efficiency at its best!

Badger's Mower/Conditioners are quiet, solid running, heavy-duty units designed to get all of your valuable forage crop without overconditioning.



Built rugged for less maintenance, longer life, adjustable dial hitch reel speed and tooth pitch. Wheel to cutter bar distance is only 38" to follow ground contours and get all the crop. Unitized header dampens high speed bounce.

Get non-stop silo filling with a Badger Northland Blower!



Badger Blowers make short work of filling high silos. And they consistently outperform other models in volume and speed. Forage or grain, Badger Blowers will handle it all. It's simply the least costly to operate, smoothest running, toughest blower you can buy

And now, Badger offers a new blower for 1000 RPM tractors!

Now you can process whole cob earcorn and fill a structure up to 80 feet high using one machine and one tractor.

Badger's Earcorn Blower Mill handles wet, shucky, even frozen earcorn. The unique crusher unit shells corn and shreds the cob ahead of the rollers which crack the kernels and reduce the cob further. Other mills available with tilting auger discharge and other options

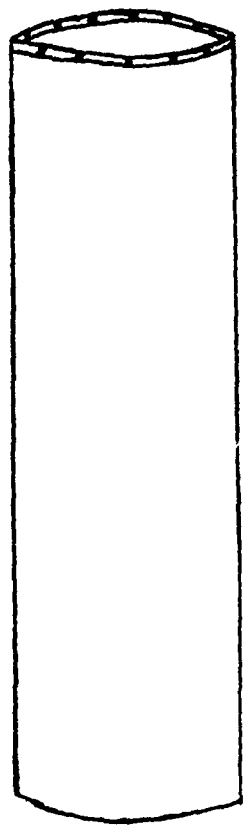
SILO LINERS



The term "Dry Matter" is possibly the most misunderstood term used in the cattle feeding business, and many people interpret the term to mean many things "Dry Matter" is the solids portion of a feed It is not a measure of the VALUE of a feed. Cattle produce not on the dry matter, but on the nutrients they consume. It is therefore important to know how much dry matter a cow is eating, but it is more important to know how much digestable nutrients is in the dry matter The term most often used to tell us this is Total Digestable Nutrients, or T D N , for short We know we can get more dry matter per acre by letting crops get older, but at early bloom for alfalfa, and early dent for corn silage the dry matter yield is a bit lower, but it has a higher T D N yield The fiber, cellulose, leaves, cob, stalks and the whole plant is easier digested when it is green, succulent and full of juice, making more T D N We must measure our crops by the T D N per acre and not by bushel, bales, or tons The next step is to retain more of the nutrients we cut in the field by making a rapid, oxygen free ferment This can be done by installing a MAY-CO PLASTIC LINER inside your silo This liner will eliminate juice run off, air leaking at the doors, and the flow of oxygen circulating through the silage By eliminating this oxygen flow more lactic acid is created making a much better ferment In an oxygen free ferment the silage will not freeze will not shrink, will not spoil or heat between feedings in hot weather and will produce more T D N and Digestable Protein without an additive major changes he's seen is the penalty levied for antibiotics in milk.

"In 1953, it was pitiful. There was no penalty involved for antibiotics."

Antibiotics in milk, says Marvin, is one of the most serious problems a field man has to encounter, to say nothing of the economic loss to the farmer.

"I think there's none that goes in deliberately. It's there by mistake, usually poor communication," he adds.

Marvin suggests that before using any antibiotics, a producer carefully read the antibiotic label for correct withdrawl times. He stresses communicating with all those who milk and identifying treated cows.

"It's best to milk the treated cows last Remember, you're treating individual cows with individual responses," warns Marvin.

While penalties for antibiotics have become more severe in the last 30 years, Marvin looks for yet another change in milk regulations.

"We need to regulate and control those people that sale milking equipment," Marvin says

Marvin has seen problems caused by improperly installed bulk tanks and other milking equipment.

"Some installation people are unscrupulous. They just want to sell equipment and that's it," he says. "Sometimes, you can pick up a pretty good bargain on a piece of equipment. Keep in mind you'll have to get someone to install it You have to come back to somebody who really knows what they're doing."

Marvin has one semi-annual inspection scheduled for today. As he drives in, he eyeballs a group of cows in a pasture for signs of unthriftyness. However, the well-tended group pays no attention to the visitor as they methodically chew their cud. He pops in unannounced and hails the farmer's wife who is mowing the lawn

Before he enters the milk house, Marvin checks the water source He's familiar with the location of the domestic sewage tank and scrutinized the area for leaks Marvin explains that an abundance of bright green grass is an indication of leakage. No leaks in sight, and Marvin passes the farmer on this five-point item.

In all the dairy will be evaluated on the basis of 100 points in nine areas: cows; milking area, milkhouse; toilet and water supply; utensils, transfer vessels, lines and bulk tanks; milking; personnel, vehicles, insects and rodents control

He checks the well site for proper protection and notes that the cover is secure, preventing any contamination from entering the water supply

A few cows are stabled inside the barn, and Marvin notices manure along the sides of the gutter

"This should be scraped off," he points out

An alleyway is cluttered with toys, barrels and a few odds and ends.

"This doesn't affect milk quality directly, but it should be clear for a good appearance," Marvin says

Before he enters the milk house, Marvin has checked. the manure loading area (spreader must be loaded on concrete), drinking cups (inlets must be above cup level, in the event of back pressure, contaminated water could be redistributed throughout the system), lighting (should have 100 watt bulbs for each three cows)

Even as he opens the milk house door, he makes sure that it swing opens correctly

"The milk house doors must be self closing and open away from the milk house If there was a colony of flies on the door, you don't want to give them a free ride in," he explains.

Andy spots a hole in an inflation, spends some time hunting for the lid to a strip cup and notes that the bulk tank is too cold, causing ice to form in the milk. All in all, the farmer passes the inspection and probably won't see Andy again for another six months

"I'd like to see farmers' attitudes concentrate on the fact that they are producing food and want to produce it well," he offers

Before he can call it a day, Andy has to deliver water samples to a processing plant where they will be picked up and delivered to a quality control lab He'd driven more than 100 miles, today, which he says is quite normal and his car, which is less than a year old is already nearing the 30,000 mile-mark

Even as he heads home to wife Eva, Andy knows he has about an hour or so of paper work still to do

Regulation 14 a and b calls for flanks, udders, and tails to be clipped and clean and there must also be evidence of proper brushing, udder washing and sanitizing equipment before Marvin can scribble a check in the yes column. Needless to say, a barnful of dirty animals, can jeopardize a producer's status with the inspector.

USDA lifts Medfly quarantines

WASHINGTON, D C — The U S Department of Agriculture released portions of California's Santa Clara and Sante Cruz Counties from Mediterranean fruit fly quarantine regulations last week

"We have gone through a time period equivalent to three Medfly life cycles with intensive trapping without finding any Medflies," said Harvey L Ford, deputy administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service "We're confident there are no more Medflies in these areas "

The released area include about 90 percent of Santa Clara and 30 percent of Santa Cruz Counties. Ford said fruits and vegetables may now move out of these areas without restriction.

The parts of these two counties still under regulation are in Santa Clara County, the northwest portion as far south and east as Sunnyvale plus an area in the Santa Cruz Mountians around Lake Elsman; and in Santa Cruz County, in general, the portion north of the Forest of Nisene State Park All of San Mateo and Alameda Counties are still under regulation, as well Ford said that status of the remaining regulated ares will be evaluated during the summer

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

MORE ON MANAGING COWS IN THE SUMMER

By now most dairy producers who have managed to survive in business are well aware that a sound ventilation system is a must for cow comfort. They also are aware that cow comfort and profits go hand in hand.

Some are not aware that good ventilation requires both a set of fans (the plural is emphasized) and an adequate and designed inlet system.

SUMMER VENTILATION

Unfortunately many dairy producers are not as aware of the need for summer air movement. A ventilation system that is adequate, or even better than just adequate, for outside temperatures below 60 may be practically worthless in the 80 degree plus weather of the summer.

Don't fight an impossible battle or spend a lot of money on summertime ventilation. How can you cool air from 80 or 90 to 60 or less when there is no place to draw the cool air from? Plan on a good air circulation system instead.

Operate under the idea that 80 degree air moving feels cooler than 80 degree air standing still. For both cow and people comfort in a stall barn, milking barn or parlor, use a set of good circulating fans. A fringe benefit of a good air circulation system is fly reduction since they don't like to operate in moving air.

Here are my suggestions based on farms I've visited with useable systems:

Open windows and doors.

Use fans with enclosed motors so they will last.

Put the fans over the head or wither area of the cows (keep screened and place so people working in the area will be protected)

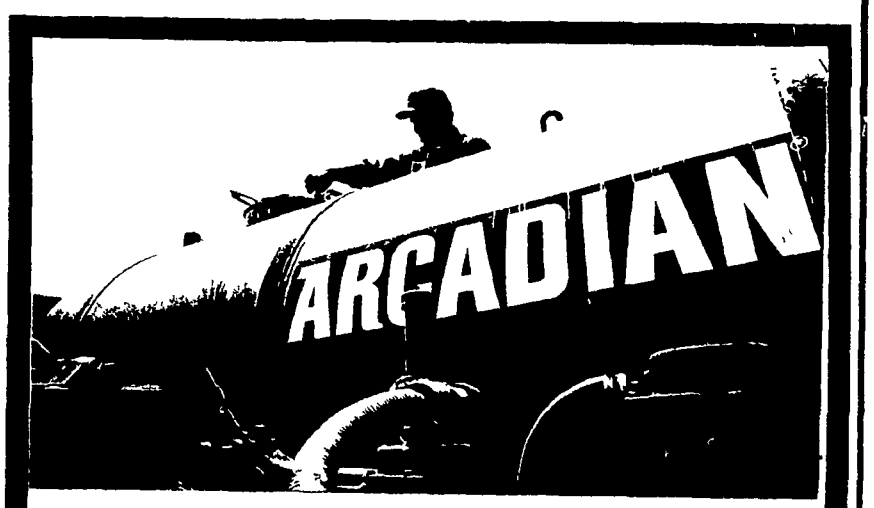
Have air movement from cool (relative) to warm areas of the milking area. For example, from milk house or east side toward sun end or side for the afternoon milking (usually the warmest milking period)

Whitewash, put up shades or blinds,or use awnings on the west side or end windows of the barn The 3 to 6 p.m. sun will probably put the mot heat into the barn or parlor area. Some people have tried a reflective material that can be put up or taken down easily.

Use one fan for every 10 cows unless you have a severe problem.

Do not use extension cords for these fans. Wire so you have a fuse box for each of the fans with a plug in that is out of the cows reach.

Run them while cows are in during the day.



For feed & weed applications ...nothing works like URAN.®

It's the extra margin of quality URAN has over other nitrogen solutions Features like low free ammonia and a near neutral pH They assure a better feed & weed application Better compatibility with most herbicides And often, better herbicide performance—especially under dry weather conditions

A URAN feed & weed application gets two important jobs done in one money-saving trip It not only saves time, fuel, manpower and equipment but means one less soil-compacting trip over your field

URAN has no pressure or volatile ammonia to worry about It can be sprayed, dribbled flown on soil or crop residues, injected subsurface or applied through irrigation water And it gives you both fast-acting and long-lasting nitrogen response

Prices, production controls spur egg industry debate

BY .EILA MILLER

LANCASTER — What's being done to improve the egg pricing system, and what should be done to ensure production stays in line with demand? These thought-provoking questions were dissected and debated during the annual egg conference held here at the Host Corral as poultry producers met for the 1982 Pa. Poultry Federation Conference.

Georgia Commissioner of Agriculture Tommy Irvin, who also chairs the national egg-pricing committee, spoke to the crowd of egg industry people about a two-year effort to create a three-member, independent quotation committe

This effort, he said, began in 1980 when the federal government granted funds for a study on egg pricing which resulted in the creation of Egg Clearinghouse — "a truer and better system for determining egg prices based on supply and demand." Irvin contrasted this system with the one-person quotation which reflects only one individual's idea on what egg prices should be.

"The National Egg-Pricing Committee is proposing a three member board to determine egg prices so that the responsibility is spread out," said Irvin. "Three heads are better than one."

This proposal was submitted January 28, 1982 to the U.S. Justice Department, reported Irvin, adding that Justice has requested additional information which will be presented by the end of June. Irvin reported the needed information will assure the Justice Department that the proposal will not create a price-fixing medium.

Once approved by Justice, the three-member committee prices would replace the Urner-Barry quotes now used in the industry, and would have no ties with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

One hurdle the new pricing committee will have to cross, however, is operating costs. Irvin estimated it will require about $80,000 annually to fund the new pricing system.

Where will these funds come from? According to Irvin, the states will be asked to pick up the tab, with shares distributed according to the size of their egg industries. He guessed that Pennsylvania's share would be about $8,000.

Currently, the state donations are basically voluntary. However Irvin said he hopes to find a more permanent funding system, either in annual dues or through a checkoff.

Although it's taken Irvin and his fellow committee members many months longer than anticipated to get the three-member quoting committee established, he said with honest relief, "I can see light at the end of the tunnel."

Within the near future, Irvin predicted, egg producers will be rid of the "bone of contention in the industry — the hit or miss quotation that each individual had to live by."

With the pricing problem almost solved, the egg industrymen turned their attentions to an equally troubling problem — production control

Presenting their cases for and against production controls were Al Wenger, secretary of Wenger Feeds, Inc. and Dave Baker, general manager of Baker Eggs Farms, Delaware. Although the two industrymen shared some of the same college courses while studying poultry science at the University of Delaware, their views on controls were as different as north and south.

Baker argued that production controls, or quotas, historically have been proven ineffective and have resulted in the industry's losing money. He pointed out that no one talks about quotas when egg producers are making profits, and they shouldn't be imposed when producers are losing money.

"Since when don't we let anyone go out of business?" Baker asked, after citing statistics showing the dramatic reduction in the number of egg producers in the U.S. since the 1930s. "Producers either meet their competitive production costs, or they get out"

To make his point more emphatic, Baker examined the Canadian quota system. He stressed it didn't cure the egg producers' problems there Instead, it elicited cries of outrage from consumers when they learned of eggs spoiling in storage and being exported far below cost

The Canadian Egg Marketing Association, said Baker, only became profitable five years after it was put into operation The cost of running the program currently exceeds $30 million annually, he added, condemning the bureaucracy it established to control the egg producers

Baker predicted the demise of CEMA due to continued egg surpluses despite additional quota cuts for the producers it was designed to protect. "It's just another example of government (messing) up supply-demand economics," he remarked

"Competition is the essence of life in America," philosophized Baker. "Otherwise there's no incentive to achieve It's the great equalizer of supply and demand

"I deserve the right to go broke as much as the next guy And I must accept the risk and rewards for the right to be my own boss"

After the applause for Baker's comments subsided, Wenger faced the audience to argue for production controls He emphasized producers should view the Canadian situation as an "opportunity to explore something new and unique where we can learn from someone else's mistakes" He asked the industrymen to throw away preconceived ideas.

In contrast to Baker's patriotic belief in a free enterprise system, Wenger stated, "There's no such thing as a free market" He explained agriculture has controlled inputs produced by workers who are members of labor unions Therefore, prices are determined for farmers who are stuck in the middle "Farmers must pay what's demanded and accept what they can get from commodity buyers"

Although they're smiling, Dave Baker, left, and Al Wenger were on opposite sides when it came to discussing egg production controls on Thursday.

Wenger added farmers are at the mercy of the U S cheap food policy, emphasizing it's not the farmer's responsibility to feed the world He related the farmer's experience to a roller coaster ride "When prices are at the bottom of the trough, consumers buy more cheap food But as prices go up, consumers resist so the peaks are shaved off and the farmer gets no long-term rewards

Farmers also must face their products being used as political weapons, both domestically and in foreign policy, said Wenger He suggested that with production quotas, farmers would receive payment based on subsidized cost when any surpluses are exported, at the government's and consumer's expense

On the "plus" side for quotas, Wenger attributed them with guaranteeing production efficiency, allowing equity in a farm since the farmer can sell the egg marketing license, and controlling swings in the market caused supply-demand effects

"Don't throw production controls out the window, or else look for another alternative," Wenger concluded

Can Pa.'s broiler industry survive?

LANCASTER — What's in future for Pennsylvania's broiler industry? Can it survive the pressures of a weak economy in the face of expanding production?

These were the questions addressed by Penn State poultry scientist Forest Muir during last Thursday's broiler conference held here at the Host Corral.

Drawing on his experiences in Maine, where the broiler industry experienced a dramatic decline in just one year, Muir was optimistic for Pennsylvania's broiler industry. He stated producers can look for sustained economic success if they continue to be concerned and guard againts complacency.

Muir pointed out that Pennsylvania's broiler producers have expanded their operations since 1970 when they delivered almost 54 million birds to the marketplace This expansion, he said, was a response to a greater consumer demand for chicken in the diet which has grown steadily since 1935. That year per capita consumption was a mere one pound compared to 1981's 50 pound figure

"The broiler industry doesn't remain static," commented Muir "It's either increasing or it's decreasing." From 1980-81, Pennsylvania increased it's broiler output by 3.5 million birds or 3.14 percent.

However, Muir pointed out that even though Pennsylvania's broiler numbers are increasing, the state's share of the national market decreased during the past year, dropping from 2.81 percent in 1980 to 2.79 percent in 1981. A growing percent of these broilers are finding a place in the processed or cut-up parts markets rather than the whole, frozen bird market.

What will help Pennsylvania's broiler industry to survive? Muir cited several key assets:

— technical competence within the industry and expertise available to it;

— the proximity of producers to feed grain supplies and consumers;

— a land base which permits producers to realize economic returns for litter, turning the waste byproduct into an income source rather than a liability;

— enthusiastic industrymen and a state where government and consumers look favorably on agriculture; and — cooperation exhibited between companies and poultry organizations.

On the other hand, Muir noted broiler producers also have several liabilities:

— being satisfied with too low a quality product;

— consumers who look at broilers as manufactured commodities rather than biological — processing plants operating at capacity,

— plants that are too small to benefit from new technology,

— high labor costs; and

— manure disposal in certain geographic areas

These positive and negative factors, explained Muir, were the result of a poll of twelve university and industry people

In his attempts to challenge the industrymen to guard against complacency, Muir shared with them the reasons behind the demise of the broiler "showcase" state — Maine — where production plummeted from 72 million to 17 million birds in the span of one year.

"The broiler industry in Maine didn't keep up with modernization in order to stay competitive," explained Muir. "In an industry that was all family-owned, producers didn't build anything into their management to allow the businesses to carry on as the owners got older They became complacent"

Freight rates that were higher than in any other area of the broiler industry also contributed to Maine's decline The rates climbed on a percentage basis, right along with the costs of unionized labor, he said.

The lack of cooperation between companies, the lack of public support for agriculture in general and poultry in particular, created the atmsophere of disinterest at research universities and in government where the broiler industry was concerned

"Government leaders didn't understand the impact a declining broiler industry would have on the state's economy as well as the five companies controlling it," said Muir "This lack of commitment set an example for others to follow and sent out a message that the broiler industry was of no importance."

Maine's broiler industry was not dependent on any resource unique to the state, observed Muir "Everything was bought in"

"Growers built houses and expected full-time income from a part-time commitment," he criticized

To save themselves from a similar fate in the future, Muir challenged the Pennsylvania broiler producers to "change for the sake of improvement — there's always room for improvement in attitude" He encouraged them to "toot their own horns" and to cultivate a "Buy Pennsylvania Broilers" philosophy among the state's consumers — SM

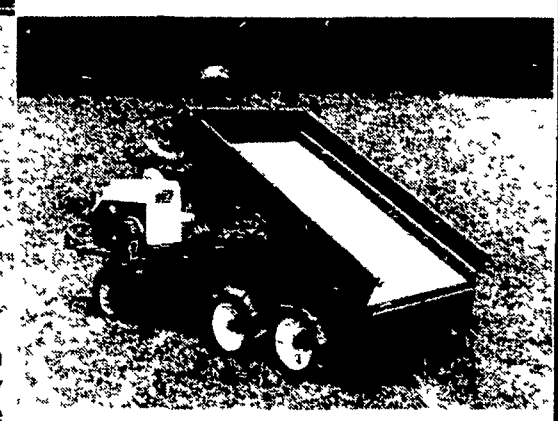
Introducing...The Incredible WU



This fuel efficient vehicle will operate a normal 8 hour work day on approximately 2 gallons of gas. Capable of hauling a one ton payload with ease, the powercart goes where your pickup truck or large farm tractor can't. Four wheel drive and hydraulic dump bed are standard equipment.

The Vicon KM-240 cuts and conditions the tallest, tangled, wettest, heaviest, hay This new mower-conditioner eliminates a pick-up reel, so you can put up more hay - FASTER. With a working width of 7'10", it can mow twice as much area in a day as most competitive models. Most competitors use a pick-up reel, which limits ground speed, adds maintenance problems and allows leaf loss

The Vicon six-disc cutter bar feeds your crop directly, stem first, into rubber rollers that condition green hay or wet grass. It dries faster and bales easier, saving time and labor.

The KM-240 has no chains, no belts, no sickle bar. If you need only a mower, look at the Vicon CM-165 (4 discs-5½' working width) or the CM-240 6 discs-7'10" working width). Both make clean cuts in heavy grass or tangled crops

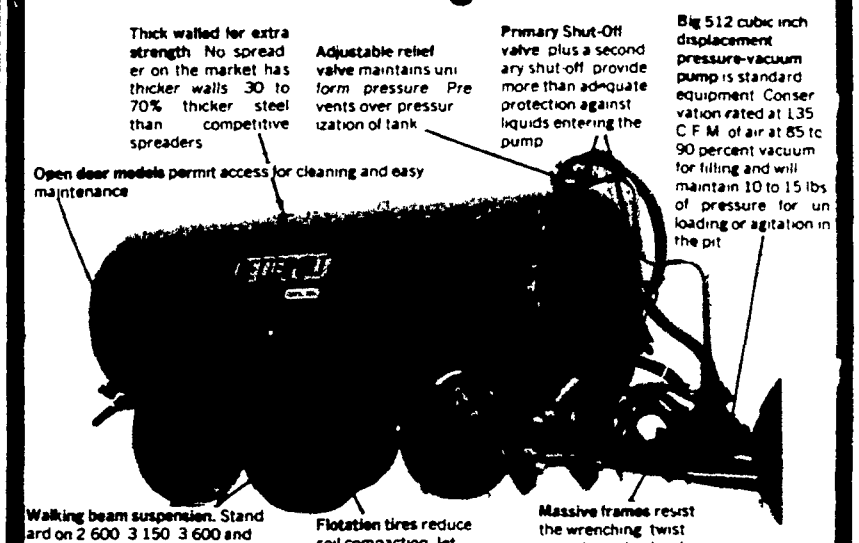
Outstanding Features



Thick walled for extra strength No spreader on the market has thicker walls 30 to 70% thicker steel than competitive spreaders
Adjustable relief valve maintains uniform pressure Prevents over pressurization of tank
Primary Shut-Off valve plus a secondary shut-off provide more than adequate protection against liquids entering the pump
Big 512 cubic inch displacement pressure-vacuum pump is standard equipment Conservation rated at 1,35 C F M of air at 85 to 90 percent vacuum for filling and will maintain 10 to 15 lbs of pressure for unloading or agitation in the pit
Open door models permit access for cleaning and easy maintenance
Walking beam suspension. Standard on 2 600 3 150 3 600 and 4 600 gallon models (Optional on 1 500 & 2 100 gallon models) Front & rear wheels on each beam follow contour of the ground provides a smooth level ride
Flotation tires reduce soil compaction let you spread on soft ground early in season
Massive frames resist the wrenching twisting jolting shocks of hard field usage year after year

Sizes - 800 gal. thru 4600 gal.
Both vacuum & augermatic spreaders for truck mount or trailer type

SPECIAL

1 - USED BETTER BILT 2600 Gallon VACUUM SPREADER w/Tandem Axle and 4" Suction Hose, Plow Down Attach.

1 - Used 5½ ft. Pickup Head for JD 3940 Harvester, good condition.

IH SUPER SAVING TIME

ReNEWed Parts prices are at the exchange level and are based on receipt of an acceptable core.

IH ReNEWed Parts are remanufactured under conditions comparable to new parts manufacture The entire restoration to original specifications is controlled by IH engineers IH ReNEWed Parts also are subject to the same rigid testing procedures as new and original equipment. You can be sure of like-new performance, but at a price that's about a third less than for a new part. And you save considerably when installing both in time and installation expense We'll put you back on the job quickly.

We're featuring IH ReNEWed Parts as our June Parts Value of the Month

There's no better value than an IH ReNEWed Torque Amplifier

- Today—New product at ReNEWed prices
- Full-year ~~warranty~~ Now extended to two years!
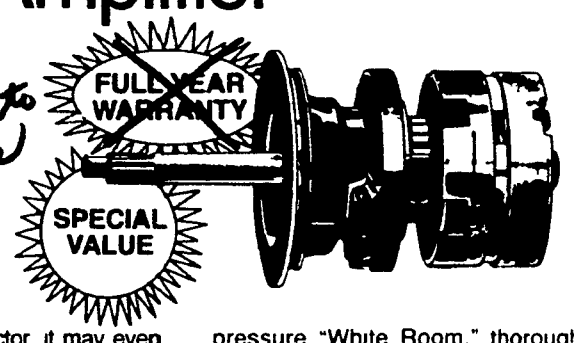
- Restores original performance



Today you can get a brand new heavy-duty IH Torque Amplifier at ReNEWed prices Yes sir, to meet demand the TA's we're selling today are brand new You get the best of both worlds: top-notch quality in brand new merchandise at the most attractive price

An IH ReNEWed Torque Amplifier assembly can go a long way toward restoring original performance to your tractor In an older tractor, it may even increase load carrying capacity That's because IH Torque Amplifier design has been improved over the years and those improvements have been incorporated in today's units The result is positive lockup and greater strength for full-time, heavy-duty operation

To prevent contamination, TA components are assembled in a positive-pressure "White Room," thoroughly tested and specially packaged This is another IH plus!

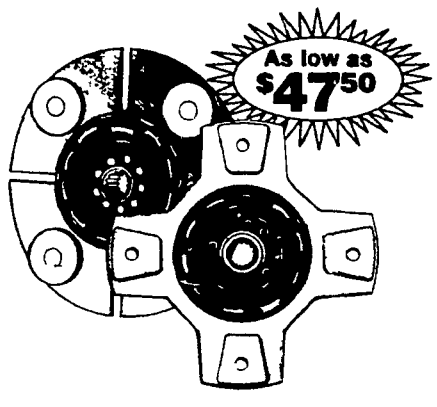
86 Series	1251 698 C91	$730.00
1566 1568 1586	1251 699 C91	730.00
88 Series	1250 255 C91	730.00



Save 32% on IH clutches!
Most popular sizes and types of clutches are available in the IH line of ReNEWed Parts These original equipment clutches are IH engineering approved and are assembled with balanced pressure plates and dampener springs for quiet gears Hardened splines in hubs provide longer life Heavy-duty levers resist wear for longer life These clutches provide like-new service and save you an average of 32 percent compared to new All ReNEWed clutches are covered by IH's liberal 90-day warranty Some examples

GUNITE Silo Relining & Repairs

Extensive tests have been conducted on Gunite Below are some of the properties of Gunite
1 Excellent bonding
2 High Density
3 Extreme strength and hardness
4 High resistance to absorption

The excellent physical properties of the material are due to the water content being only the amount needed to satisfy chemical hydration

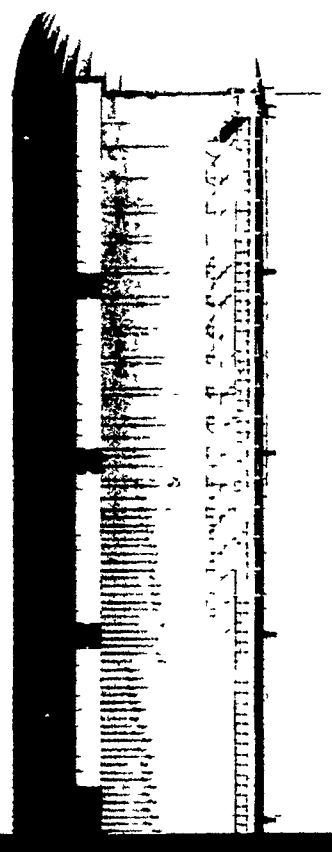
MADISON

SUCCESS BREEDS SUCCESS. AND 65 YEARS OF SUCCESS BUILT THIS NEW MADISON SILO.



Today, one out of every four silos in America is a Madison! That's because a lot of our new structures are erected on farms that already have at least one Madison. These customers know that a Madison is built to last. They also know that if there is a new idea that's better, chances are Madison will have it first.

New Madison customers quickly learn that Madison dealers do more than talk about service. For 65 years, our service people have been building a reputation for good service that can't be beat.

When you're ready to add upright storage on your farm, we invite you to compare. Look at all of the structures available. All we ask is that you include us in your comparisons. We'll take it from there.
